Introducing the WUC & Mission Statement

Introducing the World Uyghur Congress (WUC)

The World Uyghur Congress (WUC) is an international organization that represents the collective interest of the Uyghur people both in East Turkestan and abroad. WUC was established on April 16, 2004 in Munich, Germany after the East Turkestan National Congress and the World Uyghur Youth Congress merged into one united organization. The main objective of WUC is to promote the right of the Uyghur people to use peaceful, nonviolent, and democratic means to determine the political future of East Turkestan.

On the second General Assembly of WUC which held in Munich from November 24 to 27, 2006, all delegates have elected Ms. Rebiya Kadeer (Rabiy e Qadir), the leader of Uighur National Movement and the Spiritual Mother of Uyghur people, as the president of WUC.

Before Ms. Rebiya Kadeer is elected as the president of WUC, she founded the “Uyghur Human Rights and Democracy Foundation” and headed “The Uyghur American Association” based on Washington DC. She was also the winner of Rafto Prize and the nominee for 2005-2006-2007-2008 Nobile Peace Prize. For 5 years she spent her life in Chinese notorious prison. After her release, she has been exerting all her energy to fight for freedom, democracy and human rights for Uyghur people. For her great work she is entitled as “The Leader and The Spiritual Mother of Uyghur’s”.

On the first General Assembly of WUC in 2004 Mr. Erkin Alptekin was elected as a president. He had lead WUC to its second General Assembly in 2006. Mr. Alptekin is a former general secretary of the Unrepresented Nations and Peoples Organization (UNPO) based in The Hague, the Netherlands. He has remarkable experience in working with international organizations and governments in lobbying for the Uyghur people’s right to self-determination. He is also a close friend of the Dalai Lama, spiritual leader of the Tibetan people.

WUC is a democratic organization. All of WUC leadership was democratically elected by the participants from all over the world in the General Assembly. They all serve a three-year term. WUC has close contacts and working relations with most Uyghur organizations in the world that peacefully promote the human rights, religious freedom, and democracy for the Uyghur people in East Turkestan.

Mission Statement of the WUC

The main objective of the World Uyghur Congress is to promote democracy, human rights and freedom for the Uyghur people and use peaceful, nonviolent, and democratic means to determine their political future. By representing as the sole legitimate organization of the Uyghur people both in East Turkestan and abroad, WUC endeavors to set out a course for the peaceful settlement of the East Turkestan Question through dialogue and negotiation.

The WUC declares a nonviolent and peaceful opposition movement against Chinese occupation of East Turkestan and an unconditional adherence to the international accepted human rights standard as laid down in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, and adherence to the principals of democratic pluralism and rejection of totalitarianism, religious intolerance, and terrorism as an instrument of policy.
Foreword from the WUC General Secretary

In order to meet the new challenges and strong demands of the people of East Turkestan, the two major organizations in exile, the East Turkestan (Uyghuristan) National Congress and the World Uyghur Youth Congress, merged to form a historic authoritative organ, the World Uyghur Congress (WUC), in April 2004, in Munich, Germany. The new organization would coordinate action and promote and worldwide the Uyghur human rights and democracy movement.

The achievements and progress made by the leadership of the WUC in its first executive period of 2004-2006 demonstrate the importance of integrating the separated but similarly focused Uyghur political fractions in exile. The indispensability of forming the long desired and much needed amalgamated structure led by the united body for international Uyghur human rights and democracy movements is proved by the successes achieved since the Second General Assembly (a.k.a. the 5th National Assembly of the East Turkestan people) of the WUC was convened in November 2006.

During a four-day meeting, representatives of the WUC’s member organizations from all around the world discussed proposals made by various committees of the WUC, i.e. the Committee for Diaspora Affairs, the Committee for Political Affairs, the Committee for Information and Publication, the Committee for Organizational Affairs, the Committee for Financial Affairs, and the Committee for Education, Culture and Religion. The delegates also reviewed future plans and projects and adopted several important resolutions of great significance regarding our current situation.

A new WUC Executive Board was elected, which has opened a new page for the internationalization of the Uyghur human rights and democracy campaign.

Under the leadership of Ms. Rebiya Kadeer, the new and united WUC executive board has steered the organization systematically and effectively, and has geared its efforts toward WUC’s mission. Regardless of great internal difficulties such as extremely limited resources, the Executive Board continued organizational activities with great courage, and with firm and sustainable commitments achieving considerable successes.

In the past three years, the WUC has made considerable efforts for the Uyghur human rights and democracy campaign worldwide; including, the organization of worldwide campaigns to raise awareness and acknowledgement of the international community towards the Uyghur plight, the acceleration of the internationalization of the Uyghur issue, and the defeat of Chinese conspiracies libeling Uyghur dissident activities with “terrorism” in order to defame and destroy the international Uyghur human rights and democracy campaign. Furthermore, the WUC took the united-command-action system as its main avenue within the organization, set up a modernized leadership mechanism, motivated the members of the Diaspora and increased their accountability in the field worldwide against the Chinese communist regime. Meanwhile, the campaigns of the organization are also being driven to be more professional and efficient. As a result of its unremitting contributions, the WUC has gained broad respect and a firm reputation amongst the international community, and was acknowledged as the sole leadership body that truly represents the interest of the Uyghur people worldwide.

With the continuous and effective advocacy for the Uyghur cause led by WUC President Rebiya Kadeer and other WUC leaders, there have been more notable breakthroughs in the understanding of Uyghur situation among world communities. Furthermore, the plight of the Uyghur people began to attract the open sympathy of democratic countries and even garnered considerable political support by democratic governments. Today the Uyghur issue no longer remains as “unknown issue” and the Uyghur people are no longer an “unknown nation”.

By receiving Uyghur leaders on influential occasions, the major democratic powers of the world have showed their sympathy and support to the Uyghur cause, and at times openly criticized China’s unfair handling of the Uyghur people and discriminatory policies towards the entire nation.

Former U.S. President George W. Bush twice received Ms. Rebiya Kadeer, the leader and spiritual “mother” of the Uyghur people. In a “Democracy and World Security Forum” held in Prague, the Czech Republic, President Bush praised Ms. Rebiya Kadeer as an individual who has struggled for freedom, democracy and human rights in the face of tyranny. Furthermore, a number of heads of states, including Canadian Prime Minister Right Hon. Stephan Harper and Japanese Prime Minister Hon. Shinzo Abe, scores of influential political figures like UN Secretary General Mr. Kofi Annan, and the chairs of several national parliaments have received Ms. Rebiya Kadeer as the president of the WUC. These mark another major breakthrough for the WUC in gaining international recognition for the legitimacy of the international Uyghur human rights and democracy campaign.

The People’s Republic of China’s (PRC) ruthless crackdown of all political and religious dissent among Uyghurs in East Turkestan has continued for more than a decade in the name of “Strike Hard Campaigns”. Crackdowns have further intensified since 9/11 with the “War Against Terror”. This severe and systematic crackdown has resulted stigmatization, segregation and isolation of the entire Uyghur people economically, socially, politically and culturally.

In such harsh conditions, the WUC has conducted successful campaigns to inform the governments and parliaments of countries like the United States, Canada, Japan, Germany, Holland, Sweden, Norway, Switzerland, Australia, Turkey, Belgium, and the United Kingdom, as well as international bodies such as the UN and the European Parliament. The international community was presented with the truth behind PRC lies and was cautioned to be prudent about Chinese conspiracies.

Following the continual and effective work in this regard made by the WUC and its President Rebiya Kadeer, resolutions regarding the severe human rights abuses of the Uyghur people by the PRC government were passed by the U.S. Congress and the European Parliament in 2007. In addition, a “14 Point Proposal” concerning the desperate situation of the Uyghur people was discussed at the German Parliament. These successes have further strengthened the reputation and position of the international Uyghur human rights and democracy campaign.

The WUC uniquely positioned itself in continual calls for the boycotting of the 2008 Beijing Olympic Games, and laid down solid evidence as to why the PRC was not qualified to host the Olympic Games as the games have always been the symbol of friendship, equality and peace among nations. However, the WUC had long been long-standing in its call for the IOC to not grant the PRC the prestige of hosting the most important sports event unless substantial political reforms take place in China, which secure fundamental political and religious rights for its citizens through the adoption of international norms of freedom. It became evident that one of the most important and prestigious sports events had been hijacked by China for its political propaganda and its purpose of “image refreshment”.

During the Olympic games period, the WUC joined with and echoed many human rights organizations and other concerned NGOs worldwide who were protesting the Chinese government’s dismal human rights record and unmasking the PRC’s behind-the-scenes mass arrests, detention and execution of Uyghurs political and religious activists in East Turkestan under the guise of Olympic security.

The WUC has effectively participated in various UN bodies to bring much needed attention to the worsening situation of Uyghurs in East Turkestan. The WUC submitted detailed reports on Chinese treatment of Uyghurs in East Turkestan to the United Nations Committee against Torture during the official review of the implementation of the UN Convention Against Torture in the PRC, which was convened in November 2008, and the UN High Commission for Human Rights (UNHCR) Universal Periodic Review (UPR) process, which convened in February 2009. Both processes have drawn considerable attention from member states, and the WUC made successful representation in Geneva at both events.

As the highest representative organ for the democracy and human rights movement of Uyghur people, the WUC initiated in 2007 a “Uyghur Leadership Training Program on Human Rights and Democracy” funded by the National Endowment for Democracy (NED) to further strengthen the capacity of Uyghur leaders and activists around the world in understanding the basic concepts of international laws and mechanisms, and in enlightening their vision to explore ways of finding a peaceful solution to the East Turkestan problem within international law. Three phases of training program have been successfully organized over the past three years with presentations by internationally known experts, which have provided a unique learning opportunity for young Uyghurs activists to achieve considerable professionalism in their future campaigns.

Furthermore, a number of international visits undertaken by Ms. Rebiya Kadeer and other WUC leaders over the past years have also significantly contributed to the introduction and advocacy of the Uyghur cause and formed a positive international consensus.

Following are brief summaries of achievements made by the WUC in the past three years:

1. Relationships with foreign governments and parliaments.

The WUC has made considerable effort over the years in developing good relationships with foreign governments and parliaments. Sustaining such a relationship with friendly nations worldwide has been the top priority of the World Uyghur Congress, and it will continue to be the top priority in the future utilizing the solid base built in recent years.

The WUC has been consistent in its efforts to explore the ways and possibilities of building solid and long term relationships with nations and countries that can be influential and instrumental in the pursuit of achieving the mission of the Uyghur freedom movement.
Foreword from the WUC General Secretary

Led by President Rebiya Kadeer, the WUC leadership has respectively visited these countries: Canada, the U.S., Germany, Norway, Switzerland, Sweden, Belgium, Holland, the Ukraine, Poland, the Czech republic, the U.K, Turkey, Austria, France, Denmark, Estonia, Bosnia and Herzegovina, Albania, Italy, Australia, Japan, Philippine, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and others.

During these visits, WUC leaders have held special meetings and discussions with scores of high-level government officials, leaders and influential members of parliament, including Presidents, Prime Ministers and Speakers. In all talks, by addressing the urgent issues of the Uyghur people in East Turkestan, WUC leaders submitted detailed reports, proposals on the human rights situation of the Uyghur people and appealed to governments to take action on behalf of Uyghurs. These efforts positively resulted in increasing awareness and sympathy of political leaders to the Uyghur people and their situation. Moreover on various occasions, some democratic countries raised their concerns regarding Uyghurs with their Chinese counterparts and urged them to respect the right and fundamental freedom of the Uyghur people. A number of parliaments have passed resolutions condemning Chinese violations of the fundamental rights of the Uyghur people and at the same time demanding Chinese government to take urgent action to rectify its discriminatory policy towards Uyghurs.

The PRC authorities, from time to time, have mobilized diplomatic pressure to defame Ms. Rebiya Kadeer and other prominent Uyghurs activists with distorted and fabricated “terrorism” charges, and tried blackmailing democratic countries to enforce travel restrictions on WUC leaders for any formal visits. With the continuous support by hundreds of Members of the European Parliament, this political intrigue of the PRC was once again defeated in 2007, when more than 60 Uyghur democratic leaders convened a meeting at the European Parliament and were warmly received by the Parliamentarians. The reception of Ms. Rebiya Kadeer as a guest of honor by distinguished world leaders in number of Western countries has sent a strong signal to the failed policies of the Chinese government. These positive outcomes are in fact a confirmation and recognition of the WUC on the world stage as the legitimate voice of the entire Uyghur people both at home and abroad.

2. Co-operation with international organizations

WUC has recognized the importance of building close working relationships and solidarity with international organizations since day one of its establishment. In the past three years, co-operation with international organizations in human rights campaigns has been substantially strengthened and reached new levels of interaction. Working relationships of the WUC with prominent international organizations, include, but are not limited to, Amnesty International (AI), Human Rights Watch (HRW), Association for Threatened People (GfbV), UNITED, Unrepresented Nations and Peoples Organization (UNPO), Human Rights Without Frontiers (HRWF), Rafto Foundation, National Endowment for Democracy (NED), Human Rights In China (HRIC), Interfaith International and others.

A significant number of international activities have been organized in close collaboration with those organizations. These collaborations have played a positive role in broadening the influence of Uyghur democratic activities worldwide and have also created great sympathy and interest in the understanding of the Uyghur cause. The WUC voluntarily shared reports and up-to-date information on the human rights situation of East Turkestan with variety of organizations worldwide. As a result of these close engagements, a number of international human rights organizations have taken up the Uyghur human rights issue on their agenda and promoted it through their worldwide networks.

In addition, WUC leaders have attended and presented reports and papers in hundreds of international conferences organized by NGOs, political parties, academic and research institutions, universities and parliaments.

3. News and publicity work

The WUC has long considered work on news and publicity as one of the organization’s key tasks. Therefore, regardless of it’s very limited financial and human resources, the WUC effectively carried out publicity efforts and achieved notable results.

Since the launch of its official Uyghur and English languages website in 2005, the WUC has constantly upgraded the service quality of this important news channel and added Chinese, German and Japanese language pages to reach out to a wider audience. The WUC website has always been a source of reliable, accurate and timely information about the human rights situation of East Turkestan, unbiased analyses of prominent experts, reports on the WUC, and the activities of its member organizations. Today, the WUC’s website is visited 40,000 to 50,000 times daily.

The News and Publication Center of the WUC is publishing materials about Uyghur history, culture, politics, economics, society, and the human rights situation of East Turkestan in various formats and in English and German. In addition, a selection of excellent books, articles and Uyghur-related publications also are being translated into the Uyghur language to introduce them to Uyghur readers.

Short documentaries about the WUC, Uyghur history, and culture, as well as East Turkestan flags, badges, T-shirts, boycott the Beijing Olympic Games balloons, various logos, and souvenirs are short list of the materials that the News and Publication center has produced with very limited resources. The 2009-2010 calendar containing brief information on Uyghur history, historic events and historic figures has been published and distributed to international organizations, senior members of governments, influential members of various parliaments, and sympathizers of the Uyghur cause as the WUC’s New Year present.

4. Media Relations

As a legitimate voice of Uyghurs in East Turkestan, the WUC has become and continues to be a unique source and epicenter of information from a Uyghur perspective for domestic and international media outlets. Over the past years, various media outlets, universities, research centers and independent observers have contacted the WUC for reports, analyses, comments, updates and clarification from the Uyghur standpoint on number of issues related to Chinese policy in East Turkestan as events unfold. Leaders of member organizations of the World Uyghur Congress have frequently appeared on TV, Radio, and given newspaper interviews around the world and effectively counterbalanced Chinese attempts to spread false propaganda about the peaceful opposition of Uyghurs against Chinese rule. It was especially true prior and during the 2008 Beijing Olympics as China intensified its security crackdown in various cities of East Turkestan targeting peaceful Uyghur dissenters and protestors by associating them with exaggerated, unfounded and in some cases totally fabricated “terrorist” charges in order to justify harsh treatment.

This kind of continual publicity of the Uyghurs, their identity, culture and human rights situation has helped to make the Uyghur cause known and let the pleas of the Uyghur people be heard by the international community. Particularly, major news coverage of Uyghurs and the happenings in East Turkestan during the 2008 Beijing Olympic Games gave global publicity to the Uyghur issue, and drew people’s interest to the common concerns of Uyghurs.

In the past three years, WUC leader’s direct quotes of analysis, comments, updates to news programs directly linked to countless world media outlets, such as CNN, BBC, ZDF, Reuters, AP, Al-Jazeera, CBC, ARD, TBS has increased significantly.

Since President Obama’s executive order for the closure within a year of the Guantanamo detention facilities in Cuba, the media’s attention has once more focused on the 17 Uyghurs detainees in Guantanamo.

The WUC has played a crucial role in providing background information for those 17 Uyghurs in Guantanamo and highlighted the reasons that drove them to flee from China to Pakistan in the first place. By continuously reporting the still uncertain future and destiny of these Uyghurs, the international media has projected the desperate situation of the Uyghur people in East Turkestan. During this period, the broad range of international media coverage about the Uyghur issue included hundreds of news articles, TV/radio interviews, and special stories in magazine columns written in numerous languages including English, German, French, Japanese, Chinese, Arabic, Turkish, Russian, Italian, and Spanish.

5. Our Work on the Political, Cultural and Educational Front

Legitimacy of the WUC as the highest and sole representative organ for the voice of Uyghurs in East Turkestan is firm and clear in the hearts and minds of Uyghurs around the world. This is in fact the driving force and strength of the WUC in unifying supporters under the mission that it is undertaking to find a peaceful, everlasting, and long overdue solution to the problem of East Turkestan in democratic and acceptable ways.

The principal stance and legitimacy of the WUC in leading the Uyghur human rights and democracy campaign, which was constituted by East Turkestan organizations in exile around the world, was generally accepted and the opinions of our people towards the organization have solidified over the years. Today, the WUC is the sole representative organ of the Uyghur human rights and democracy movement and the collective interests of the Uyghur people, which was consolidated by all East Turkestan organizations and acknowledged and respected by the international community.

Internal unity of our people, inter-organizational cooperation and solidarity between our member organizations around the world has been and will be the key for the continuing success of the World Uyghur Congress in achieving its mission. For the first time in the short history of the freedom movement of East Turkestan, only the WUC has succeeded in bringing all the factions and organizations under one umbrella and unified them in action and mission for common purposes. From such a position of leadership, the WUC paid substantial attention to unify the actions of all the umbrella organizations and to facilitate and strengthen inter-organizational communication and collaboration.

Mobilization of member organizations around the world in various campaigns on set dates and times for announced purposes has only been possible with the leadership of WUC. Such mass mobilization was demonstrated during the rally prior to and after the 2008 Beijing Olympics, various commemorations of historic events and tragedies such as the Baren uprising, the Ghulja massacre, and rallies on international events of significance with other organizations.

During the 2008 Beijing Olympics alone, the WUC organized more than 120 protest rallies and demonstrations around the world to seize the movement to raise the fundamental concerns of Uyghurs in East Turkestan under Chinese rule.

The WUC has emphasized great importance on promoting the cultural, traditional, religious and social values of Uyghurs among the younger generation of Diaspora members. On National Day of the East Turkestan Republic and many other religious, national festivals for Uyghur people, the WUC has organized many cultural and commemoration events to celebrate together in order to strengthen the national unity, love, friendship and coherence within the Diaspora. This kind of promotion and effort has positively contributed to the understanding of Uyghur culture and ethnic identity, especially in the current exiled and isolated situation Uyghurs find themselves in.

Special effort and proposals have been made over the past years for raising Uyghur children within their national culture, and giving them an opportunity in mother tongue education.

As the PRC authorities fiercely extend the scale of cultural genocide against the Uyghur people in East Turkestan, every faithful Uyghur is being forced to seriously consider the future and the very existence of their nation and the next generation. Outside of East Turkestan too, keeping the Uyghur national identity and unique culture heritage is becoming a sensitive issue among the Diaspora, which is very small in number and scale especially in the U.S. and Europe where the core of the Uyghur human rights and democracy movement resides. Therefore, it became urgently necessary for everyone in the Uyghur Diaspora to take proper action to raise their children within the Uyghur identity and to secure the continuity of our campaigns in the future. With this goal in mind, the WUC issued a call to all of its member organizations to prepare facilities in order to provide Uyghur children in their local community with necessary cultural and language training. Directly set up by the WUC and since 2005, the special training program for Uyghur youth growing up in Germany is still successfully running today. A special introductory course textbook of the Uyghur language was also prepared as part of the WUC’s efforts for Uyghur children, which filled a long-existing gap.

Strongly promoted by the WUC, various sized schools for Uyghur children are being set up one after another in Germany, Norway, Sweden, Canada, Turkey and Pakistan to begin to educate those young members of the Diaspora about the Uyghur language, culture, history and religion. As part of its patriotic education, these schools also teach children the history, geography, culture and current situation of East Turkestan. A number of knowledge contests and relevant cultural activities were also specially organized for these children to increase their interest in their cultural heritage and to motivate them to practice it.
Foreword from the WUC General Secretary

The PRC authorities’ have intensified and committed campaigns of cultural genocide over the Uyghur people in East Turkestan by systematically targeting the Uyghur language, history, culture and religious beliefs, which are all in imminent threat. As a response to this campaign, the WUC has taken this issue seriously and adopted necessary measures for the promotion of the national identity, cultural and religious heritage of the Uyghurs, as well as other historic figures and events among the younger Uyghur generation through various ways, including dedicated cultural windows in websites, internet-based TV programs, online and printed publications, and periodic cultural events with mass participation.

Now unified textbooks, DVD films and online tools are available for parents to teach Uyghur language and cultural values to their children. Also recently published cartoon based on Uyghur fairy-tales and ancient legends are great source for our younger generation to learn about our past.

To further promote our cultural and religious values among younger generations, the WUC has always supported innovative ways and approaches in educating our children in a dynamic environment. Various knowledge competitions and contests organized for younger generations have created a platform for them to present exchange and learn about our national values, including knowledge of our past and present, distinguished culture, traditions and religious belief etc…

This motivation and cultural survival campaign will continue and be expanded all around the world.

6. Work on immigration and Diaspora affairs

During its 2nd General Assembly in 2007, the WUC has conducted specific discussions on Diaspora and immigration affairs and identified the Uyghur refugee problem as an urgent matter to be addressed. As a result of this emergency and to deal with a crisis that has international magnitude as the majority of Uyghur refugees are scattered in number of countries neighboring East Turkestan, the WUC decided to establish a specific committee. Since its establishment, the Diaspora and Refugee committee has done a tremendous amount of work in data collection, identity verification and responding to the emergency needs of those Uyghur refugees in collaboration with other international organizations and governments. As the reputation of WUC increases and people both in and outside East Turkestan gradually trust and faith in the organization and its works, the Uyghur refugees begin to ask help and assistance whenever and wherever they have difficulties. WUC has extended necessary assistances, despite it’s very limited capacity and own difficulties, in order to meet the needs of the Uyghurs fled out of PRC or living in a third country. In special cases, the WUC even dispatch personals to visit Uyghurs who live in difficult situations and help them financially to ease their economic burdens and exert many efforts to facilitate the settlement of their various problems.

Almost all neighboring States to East Turkestan such as Pakistan, Kyrgyzstan and Kazakhstan, where majority of Uyghur refugees temporarily stationed, have compromised to China’s demand of repatriating Uyghur refugees back to China, largely due to fear of losing economical, financial and political incentives offered by China to them. In such, Uyghur refugees have become trade commodities in relationship of Pakistan, Kyrgyzstan and Kazakhstan with China. Despite such an unfavorable situation, WUC has actively engaged with UN High Commission for Refugee (UNHCR), governments, parliaments or diplomatic missions of those countries where the Uyghur seek political asylum and international human rights organizations in order to facilitate the process of the Uyghur political asylum seekers and their related affairs. Ms. Rebiya Kadeer also visited the offices of UNHCR several times and submitted reports on critical situation of Uyghur political asylum seekers, and appealed the authorities to draw special attention and extent all necessary assistances to their difficulties. As a result, many cases of Uyghur political asylum seekers were positively concluded and granted political asylum status.

Every year, especially during the important Muslim festivals like Ramadan or Eid ul-Ada, the WUC has mobilized the Uyghur communities in several countries to organize charity campaigns for those needy brothers and sisters in order to ease their difficulties and deliver them the warmth of the united Uyghur family. Furthermore, the WUC and all its member organizations extended many kind of assistance such as providing legal aids and translation services, advising and solving their various problems, writing confirmations or references letters to their political activities to the immigrants and political asylum seekers from East Turkestan.

7. Press Statements and Calls for Action

The WUC has been closely observing and analyzing all political events especially those regional or global changes which directly or indirectly affect the political, economical, social and cultural situation of East Turkestan, and immediately respond sudden events and explain the WUC position. Especially during the Beijing Olympics, the international Media closely observed and broadly covered the position and statements of the WUC. During that special period, the WUC has made instant press statements in English, German, Turkish, Chinese and Japanese languages to explain the stance of the organization and provide accurate information on happenings in East Turkestan.

WUC also called its member organizations to take actions to for important events. Today, a unified and mature command and action system is in place to guarantee the decisions of the WUC being smoothly transferred and implemented. Accordingly, the organizations under the leadership of WUC become even more eager and ready for taking and implanting responsibilities.

8. Activities in the United Nations (UN)

One of the main focuses of the WUC activities during the past three years was to contribute the internationalization of the Uyghur cause and to push it to the UN agenda. The WUC set high priority to the efforts necessary for this goal and made considerable works. Among others, by collaborating with the international human rights organizations that have UN observatory status, the WUC has respectively organized conferences in the UN, met with high level officials of the UNHCR and other relevant Committees, submitted special reports on several subjects under the UN framework, lobbied the representatives of scores of democratic countries at the UN in order to raise awareness towards the worsening situation of the Uyghur people in East Turkestan.

Very recently, a special report on the situation of torturing, mishandling and other forms of crucial treatment of Uyghur prisoners and prisoners of conscious and conditions of the prisons in the East Turkestan was prepared in collaboration with the Unrepresented Nations and Peoples Organization (UNPO) and it was accepted by the UN Commission Against Torture (CAT). Besides that, a WUC delegation attended the UNCAT’s formal session to review the implementation of UN Convention Against Torture and situation of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in the PRC. During the session, the WUC delegation held a speech to address the critical situation of Uyghur prisoners in East Turkestan. The reports and questions raised by the WUC have played important role during the UN examination of PRC.

The WUC highly regarded the importance of using the relevant UN mechanism to push the Uyghur issue to the UN. As being one of the key elements of the new UN Human Rights Council and a key instrument for safeguarding the human rights and freedom, the UN’s Universal Periodic Review (UPR), a unique process which involves a review of the human rights records of all 192 UN Member States once every four years and which reminds responsibility to fully respect and implement all human rights and fundamental freedoms. In this regard, the WUC has made several important activities. A special report prepared by the WUC and the Uyghur American Association (UAA) was submitted to the UNUPR Committee and it was listed on the official UN website along with other accredited reported on the same subject. Regarding the coming UPR session, the WUC made considerable and effective lobbying campaigns in close collaboration with the UNPO to those diplomats and representatives of scores of UN Member States in Berlin and at the UN Office in Geneva respectively. During the period, the WUC team has met with high level diplomatic and representatives of total 35 countries respectively, among which the EU Member States, member countries of the UN Human Rights Council and UPR Committee. As a result of such intensive diplomatic engagement of the WUC, countries like Czech Republic, Australia, Japan, Canada, Switzerland etc. specifically raised the Uyghur issue in their three-minute oral statements during the official UPR session at the UN Office in Geneva. In addition, some other countries like UK, Denmark, Sweden and Norway etc. also raised the Uyghur human rights issue in their written reports, which were later submitted to the UPR Commission. For the first time, the Uyghur issue is raised by the UN Member States openly at an exclusive UN meeting. By using its very limited resources and capabilities and the successful advocacy of the Uyghur human rights situation, total 9 member states have raised the Uyghur issue in an official UN meeting in different forms. This is not only a real success for the WUC’s efforts at the UN level, but also a success for the Uyghur people, whose plight is being heard in the international community.

9. Boycotting the Beijing Olympics and relevant activities

As it was competing for the Olympic Bid of 2008, the PRC government had made big promises to the Olympic Committee and the international community to improve human rights situation in the country. But unfortunately, as soon as it was granted the honor to host the 2008 Summer Olympic Games in 2008 in their capital, the PRC has even tightened up its iron grip on the freedom of the people and the human rights abuses in PRC reached an unprecedented scale around the Olympic period. Soon after the brutal crackdown of Tibetan uprising in March 2008, in order to keep the Uyghur people quite, the PRC authorities declared a state of emergency in East Turkestan and wildly pursue its policy of spreading state terror by launching mass scaled arbitrary detention campaigns, extra judiciary sentencing and executing scores of Uyghur dissidents. Alone in the Hoten Prefecture of East Turkestan, the peaceful demonstration of the Uyghur women was violently cracked down, and 700 more Uyghur women were arrested. Until today their whereabouts remains unknown.

Plenty of evidences of severe human rights abuses by the PRC using the name of Olympic Games once again showed the world why the PRC was not qualified for the host of Olympic Games, which is the symbol of friendship, equality and peace among the nations. The WUC has continuously appealed the international community not to honor the PRC by granting it the title of hosting the most important sports event. Later developments have proven the warnings of the WUC’s call for boycotting the 2008 Beijing Olympics was evident. In 2007, the WUC Executive Committee decided to set up a special committee to lead its global efforts for appealing the international community to draw attention on the human rights abuses of the Uyghur people in East Turkestan, calling for the boycott of Beijing Olympics and the Olympic Torch Relay across East Turkestan soil. During the course of campaigns, the WUC also initiated a “Freedom Touch for the East Turkestan” activity and mobilized all member organizations to actively take part in this campaign. As a result, scores of anti-Beijing Olympics activities have been organized and these have positively contributed the awareness-raising of the international community towards the Uyghur people and human rights situation in East Turkestan.

10. Uyghur Leadership Training Seminar on Democracy and Human Rights

Another systematic effort of the WUC over the past three years was the implementation of its annual Uyghur Leadership Training Seminar on Democracy and Human Rights program, which has been generously financed by the National Endowment for Democracy (NED). In order to strengthen the efforts of the global campaign for human rights and democracy for the Uyghur people, increase the capability of Uyghur democracy leaders and speed up the peaceful resolution of the East Turkestan issue under the framework of international law, since 2007 the WUC initiated a “Uyghur Leaders Training” program. After it successfully organized the first phase of the program in the Dutch city Gaga and at the European Parliament in Brussels, the WUC has organized the second phase of the Uyghur leadership-training seminar from 21-23 April 2008 in Berlin. In both seminars, more than 60 Uyghur democracy leaders all around the world gathered together to receive systematic training from the prominent experts in areas of human rights, democracy, international law, diplomacy, UN mechanism. In addition, they visited International Criminal Court, European Parliament, and German Bundestag etc. and were very impressed by the examples of world democracies.

For the first time Uyghur leaders systematically received theoretical and practical fundamentals of campaigning for human rights and democracy in the framework of international law and the UN mechanism. Uyghur leaders have developed positive skills and integrated it in their campaigns from the practical knowledge they have learnt through well-organized lectures by the prominent experts on various topic such as UN Universal Declaration of Human Rights, working mechanism of UN body and European Parliament, effective ways to organize NGO activities, proper approach to engage with UN and EU mechanism, exploring the ways of influencing their decision making, practical steps towards the internationalization of Uyghur issue etc.. They also profited from this practical training blended with their experiences gained thorough long years of public campaigns.

In 18 and 19 May 2009, the WUC has convened an international conference on “past, present and future of East Turkestan: 60 Years under the People Republic of China” in Washington, DC, prominent scholars on Uyghur issue gave lectures based on their very recent research and analysis on existing problems of Uyghur people in economical, political, and socials areas in East Turkestan under the 60 years of PRC’s communist regime.

These are the works accomplished by the WUC with its limited capabilities in terms of finance and human resources. Of course, it is still far behind the expectation of our people and the actual needs of our mission. With valuable suggestion and more new and practical ideas of Uyghur leaders, activists, experts; though urgent discussions and making important resolutions concerning the desperate situation of our people; and the election of new round of WUC leadership, we truly believe that our global campaign for the Uyghur people in East Turkestan will be raised to another level and secure the way of ultimate victory. By strongly adhering to the common will of the Uyghur people, we also deeply believe that the WUC will successfully accomplish this noble task entrusted by its people.

<td>To peacefully protest the Chinese government’s ongoing persecution of the Uyghur people and gross violations of their fundamental human rights, the WUC called upon all umbrella organizations around the world to hold a demonstration in front of Chinese embassies and consulates in respective countries on October 1, the national day of China. On this day, Uyghurs in Germany, Holland, Norway, Sweden, Turkey, Britain, and the U.S. peacefully held demonstrations before Chinese embassies and consulates. <td>The World Uyghur Congress (WUC), in order to successfully conduct the Uyghur Leadership Training Project (ULTP), the first such project supported by the National Endowment for Democracy (NED), decided to cooperate with international human rights organizations and NGOs and to use their profound experience in conducting such training workshops. For this reason, the WUC contacted the Unrepresented Peoples and Nations Organization (UNPO) in The Hague, Human Rights Without Frontiers (HRWF) in Brussels, and Amnesty International (AI) in London and consulted with them regarding our project. During the consultation, the WUC established a close working relationship with UNPO and decided to use its experience and support to conduct ULTP in The Hague. After serious consultation between Dolkun Isa, director of ULTP, with Marino Busdachin, general secretary of UNPO, they worked out the program details. They also put the names of key speakers at ULTP on a list and began to contact them. In addition, they decided to conduct ULTP from March 11 to 17, 2007.</td>

5 February 2007
February 5, 2007 was the 10th anniversary of the Ghulja massacre. On the 5th of the February 1997, a peaceful march by Uyghurs in Ghulja city, East Turkestan (ET), demanding respect for human rights and equality was ruthlessly suppressed by the Chinese regime. As a result, hundreds were massacred and thousands more were imprisoned. This is a tragic event in recent Uyghur history. In order to consecrate the martyrs of the massacre and draw the attention of the world to the Uyghur plight, the WUC called on Uyghur communities worldwide to commemorate the event. With the WUC taking the lead, the international Uyghur dissident organizations showed solidarity and responded to the call without hesitation. They marched in the streets of major western cities in protest.

Munich, Germany

Under the direct leadership of the WUC, a large-scale public protest was staged in Munich, Germany on the February 3. The demonstration started at Sendlinger Square and marched across the heart of the city for 5km, before reaching Odeons Square. The municipal government facilitated the protest by closing the traffic along the main march routes. The WUC leadership attended the protest and addressed the congregation. They condemned the Chinese regime publicly for the bloodshed. The main speakers were Mr. Asqarjan, the vice chairman of WUC, Secretary General Dolkun Isa, MP Margareta Bause, the international human rights group representative in Munich, Hermna Shimd, and the head of the Bavaria Refugee Committee. The participants accused the Chinese communist regime of oppression and inhuman treatment of Uyghurs in ET and exposed the racist and hegemonic discriminatory nationality policy of the Chinese state. Through factual evidence, the speakers revealed institutional bigoted Chinese chauvinism and its contempt for other ethic cultures and traditions. In recent years, the regime intensified its overt policy of assimilation, marginalization and acculturation of the ethnic Uyghurs and other non-Han communities in the region. The speakers also emphasized the gravity of human rights violation in ET. The protest attracted a significant following among the German public and the Turkish communities in the country with over 2000 people attending the gathering. The whole event was meticulously planned and effectively executed. During the two months preparation phase, six meetings were held between the WUC and relevant NGOs. Over 5000 pamphlets were distributed and around 500 posters, 150 ET flags and 100 placards were prepared for the purpose.

2 March 2007
Ms. Kadeer, Mr. Seytoff and Mr. Kanat attended a meeting organized by President Lorne Craner and Vice President Elizabeth Dugan at the International Republican Institute in support of Uyghur human rights.

3 March 2007
Starting from March 3, 2007, under the patronage of the WUC, the Uyghur Sweden Committee introduced a youth training program for Uyghur children. The program was designed to promote awareness of Uyghur culture and traditions among young Uyghurs. It will teach Uyghur language, culture, traditions and history.

3 March 2008
A WUC delegation visited the Turkish Economic and Social Research Centre. Vice secretary of the centre, Prof. Arif Ersoy, kindly received and patiently listened to their briefing about the Uyghur problem and expressed concern about the persecution of the Uyghurs by the Chinese state.

6 March 2007

6 February 2007
UHRP was contacted by a credible source regarding the imprisonment of three Uyghurs in Kyrgyzstan - Tohtiniyaz, Ablimit and Ali Masum. According to UHRP’s source, the Kyrgyz authorities had decided to pardon these three Uyghurs, but one of the terms of the pardon was that they would be sent back to their country of citizenship - China. These three Uyghurs were imprisoned in Kyrgyzstan on political charges. Therefore, they are likely to face arrest, torture and even execution by the Chinese government once they are handed over to China. UHRP learned additional information about these Uyghurs in Kyrgyzstan in April. Mr. Seytoff translated the information received about the Uyghurs in Kyrgyzstan.

Also on March 7, Mr. Seytoff and Amy met with Rana Siu Imboden and Tyler Stilley at the National Democratic Institute, and discussed issues such as the trafficking of Uyghur women and strategies UHRP can use to raise its profile and gain support for its work.
8 March 2007 UHRP learned in February that Ablikim had been tried in secret on January 22, that he was in very poor physical condition, and that he had been tried on charges of secessionism. At that point, no one knew what Ablikim’s sentence would be, although we now know that he was sentenced to nine years in prison on April 17. On March 8, using information provided by UHRP, Amnesty International issued an Urgent Action regarding Ablikim’s secret trial and ill health.

8 March 2007 In order to expose the inhuman treatment of Uyghur women and children by the Chinese authorities under the pretext of birth control, the East Turkestan Cultural Cooperation Society established a Women's Committee in that respect. The committee held a press conference in Turkey on the March 8 on International Women’s Day and condemned the Chinese persecution and genocide of Uyghur mothers and children under the guise of family planning policy. The Committee appealed to the Turkish public to support the Uyghur cause and to pressure the Chinese to stop violating the basic human rights of the Uyghur people.

6-11 May 2007  In order to successfully organize the Uyghur Leadership Training Project (ULTP), and to learn from the experience of the UNPO (Unrepresented Nations and People’s Organization), the World Uyghur Congress decided to cooperate with the UNPO. The seminar was scheduled for May 6-11, 2007 in The Hague, the Netherlands, and was jointly prepared by both the WUC and the UNPO. In order to organize the seminar at an international level and to familiarize participants of the seminar with the notion of democracy, international law and the structure of the United Nations and of the European Union, the WUC formed a close relationship with international human rights NGOs, university professors, scholars, political groups in the European Parliament and MEPs. Efforts were made to gain their support and active participation in the seminar. Some of them were invited as keynote speakers at the seminar.

7-10 May 2007  The World Uyghur Congress (WUC) in collaboration with the Unrepresented Nations and Peoples Organization (UNPO) gathered more than 50 present and future leaders of the Uyghur community for a series of workshops and seminars (Democracy and Human Rights Leadership Training Seminar for Uyghurs) to introduce participants to the workings of key international bodies and effective nonviolent campaigning.

Leaders of the Uyghur community gathered in The Hague to take part in an intensive program of lectures, discussions, workshops, educational visits, meetings at the European Parliament, and plenary sessions to prepare a concerted effort to raise international awareness of the reality of life within China’s borders as an ethnic and religious minority. As China’s economic weight increasingly encourages the international community to accept promises of “democratization” and “human rights protection”, and with China preparing to present itself to the world during the 2008 Olympic Games, minority communities are working to remind the world that the People’s Republic of China remains a state in which the death penalty is applied more frequently than anywhere else, in which freedom of religion, speech, and assembly are substantially curtailed, and in which ethnic and religious minorities, exemplified by the Uyghurs, continue to suffer the systematic violation of social and political rights.

In this context the event in The Hague, organized by the WUC and the UNPO and, funded by the National Endowment for Democracy (NED), sought to ensure that the Uyghur community receives the knowledge and experience necessary not only to make efficient use of the international bodies that exist to ensure their rights, but also to build capacity in the field of human rights and democratization activities. Seminars and workshops held by experts and practitioners in their fields, covered topics ranging from “lobbying at the United Nations” to “effective use of human rights instruments” and “nonviolent organization and campaigning”. This was supplemented by visits and introductions to the International Court of Justice (ICJ), the International Criminal Court (ICC) and the European Parliament. Workshops and interactive seminars stimulated active debate about how the Uyghur community might best direct its efforts to more effectively document, publicize, and pursue an end, through effective advocacy and campaigning, to the systematic and widespread human rights against the people of East Turkestan.

Speakers at the event included Mr. Michael Cashman MEP, Mr. Istvan Szent-
Activities Report of the WUC (January-December 2007)

Ivanyi MEP, Dr. Ulrich Delius, Vice-Chairman of the Society for Threatened Peoples, Prof. Dr. Georg Frerks, Utrecht University, Ms. Louisa Coan Greve, Director, East Asia, National Endowment for Democracy, Mr. Erkin Alptekin, former President of the WUC, Prof. Yitzhak Shichor, University of Haifa, Mr. Marco Perduca, Nonviolent Radical Party, Ms. Fatma Aktaş, Chairwoman of Selam Netwerk, Dr. Erkin Ekrem, Ching Yun University in Taiwan, Mr. Vejis Gündoğur, Turkish Democratic Union, Mr. Ken Kostyo, Global Democracy Resource, Mr. Joshua Cooper, University of Hawaií, Dr. Niccolo Figa-talamanca, Program Director, No Peace Without Justice, Ms. Isabella Nitschke, Human Rights in China, Ms. Franziska Eckelmans, International Criminal Court and Mr. Marino Busdachin, General Secretary of the Unrepresented Nations and Peoples Organization (UNPO).

The event also greatly benefited from the active participation and contributions by Uyghur democracy leader, Ms. Rebiya Kadeer, President of the WUC, who is herself among the victims of China’s efforts to bring “stability” to East Turkestan. The participation of Ms. Kadeer, as a remarkable woman personifying Uyghur activism through peaceful means, significantly contributed to the event.

Moreover, speakers emphasized the need to document thoroughly all abuses, underlining how this provides a crucial link between events on the ground and the work of international rights groups such as the UNPO. The continued Uyghur commitment to non-violence was also applauded, as speakers emphasized the need for continuous renewal and innovation when planning nonviolent action, especially as the world’s media descends upon Beijing for the forthcoming Olympic Games. The European Parliament proved a particularly welcoming venue for the Uyghur cause. Mr. Michael Cashman MEP noted that despite intensive effort, the Uyghur voice had not been silenced. Evidence of this was in abundance, as Dr. Willy Fautre, Director of Human Rights without Frontiers, and Ms. Cindy Lane of Human Rights Watch, both outlined the ways in which they and their organizations were actively pursuing Uyghur rights within European Union institutions - from their religious freedom to the fate of the young Uyghur men currently held in Guantanamo Bay. The main message, stressed also by Mr. Istvan Szent-Ivanyi MEP, was clearly that if all parties ensured close cooperation and coordination, the Uyghur voice would grow only stronger, and would undoubtedly find a natural ally in the European Parliament, an institution founded in part on the determination to condemn marginalization, discrimination, and conflict to the history books.

Meetings with Mr. Graham Watson MEP, Chairperson of the Alliance of Liberals and Democrats for Europe (ALDE), and Baroness Sarah Ludford MEP also confirmed a willingness on behalf of parliamentarians to work with Ms. Kadeer, UNPO and the Uyghur community to ensure European institutions take a leading role in pressuring Chinese authorities to respect their international commitments and afford all their citizens their full catalogue of human, political, and social rights.

As Uyghur leaders return to their respective communities to communicate their impressions and conclusions from a week of intense dialogue, and whilst minorities living within China continue to face a precarious future, the event is envisioned to enable and empower Uyghur leaders to make their campaign for human rights more visible, to ensure effective action and to draw increased international attention to one of the most underreported campaigns of human rights abuse anywhere in the
During the seminar, the WUC executive committee conducted its executive meetings in the evenings. WUC leaders presented reports on their activities in different parts of the world. The participants have also discussed how to apply the theory learned in the seminar to practical events.

As an example of applying theory to practice, members agreed upon organizing more events that will attract the attention of the world community to the Uyghur cause before the 2008 Olympics in China. For this reason, a special commission named the “Olympic Committee” was established at the end of the seminar.

The Uyghur leaders who participated in the seminar fellow Uyghurs upon their return to their home communities. Members have presented what they learned at the seminar at a number of gatherings.

6-11 November 2008
The 41st Session of the United Nations Committee Against Torture (CAT) meeting was convened from November 3 to 21 at the UN in Geneva. The CAT reviewed the situation of torture and ill treatment in China from November 6 to 11. A WUC delegation consisting of Mr. Dolkun Isa, Mr. Gheyur Qurban, and Mr. Abduweli Almas –a victim of cruel torture practices in a Chinese prison- attended CAT’s China review.

On November 6, delegates from 16 NGO’s including Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch, Human Rights in China, Tibetan organizations, Falun Gong movements, NGOs from Hong Kong and Uyghurs organizations gathered at the AI office in Geneva to discuss strategies and issues concerning the UN session.

In the afternoon of November 6, the 10 members of the CAT Committee received the delegates of NGOs at the UN Office in Geneva and listened to their reports and opinions. On behalf of the WUC, Mr. Gheyur presented the torture and ill-treatment situation of Uyghur political prisoners detained by PRC authorities.

On November 7, during the official meeting of the CAT review on China, Li Baodong, Ambassador and Permanent Representative of the PRC to the United Nations Office in Geneva made an official report on China’s implementation of the UN Convention Against Torture. After the report, members of the CAT subsequently raised many critical questions to the Chinese delegation with regard to their report, which are either totally ignored in the report or were stated very vaguely in terms of accounts on individual cases of torture. The members of the CAT Committee raised four issues based on the information provided by the WUC delegation in the preceding NGO session.

In the presence of more than 50 people, including delegates of NGOs, UN observers, members of the CAT, the final meeting of the China review within the framework of the Convention Against Torture was convened on November 11. The Chinese delegation answered the questions which were raised by the members of the CAT on November 7. Unfortunately, the answers by the Chinese delegation disappointed the members of the CAT and all other observers as the Chinese delegation was still avoiding the facts. The Chinese delegates tried their best to divert public attention from serious human rights violations in the Chinese law enforcement system. Rather than giving a full account on the general or individual cases of torture and ill treatment, the delegation intentionally wasted time by teaching the Committee members about Chinese law.

In afternoon, the WUC, Tibet Organizations and Human Rights in China organized a joint press conference in the UN Press Hall regarding the CAT Committee’s China review. Journalists from BBC, Reuters and other news media attended the conference.

As a result of the close collaboration with various NGOs during the CAT review on

| 26 January to 12 February | A Brief Report on the WUC’s Efforts for the UPR Meeting on China at the UN |
The UNHCR’s 4th UPR Meeting was convened from February 2 to 13, 2009, at the UN in Geneva. Being an important mechanism to review the human rights situation in countries, this UPR meeting has a significant role. Under the framework of the UPR, the PRC’s human rights record will be questioned in front of the representatives of all UN member states. The PRC’s human rights record was scheduled to be reviewed on February 9 and 11, 2009.

The UPR meeting is the most important and efficient way to push the Uyghur human rights issue on to the international agenda, and the WUC defined clear goals in this regard and set all related work as top priority. The WUC carried out the following actions:

1. A special report on the universal human rights situation of the Uyghur people, prepared in close collaboration with the WUC and Uyghur American Association (UAA), was submitted to the UN High Commission for Human Rights (UNOHCHR). Alongside other stakeholders report’s by several NGOs, the WUC’s report was published on the official website of the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR). http://lib.ohchr.org/HRBodies/UPR/Documents/Session4/CN/WUCUHRP_CHN_UPR_S4_2009_WorldUyghurCongressAndUyghurHumanRightsProject_JOINT.pdf

2. The WUC and the UNPO jointly prepared a special report on the universal human rights issues of Uyghurs, Tibetans and Mongols. It was previously submitted to the OHCHR and listed on their official website. http://lib.ohchr.org/HRBodies/UPR/Documents/Session4/CN/UNPO_CHN_UPR_S4_2009_TheUnrepresentedNationsandPeoplesOrganization.pdf

3. The Islamic Human Rights Commission (IHRC) also submitted to the OHCHR a special report on the religious freedom of the Uyghur people. This report was listed on the OHCHR’s official website available at the following link: http://lib.ohchr.org/HRBodies/UPR/Documents/Session4/CN/IHRC_CHN_UPR_S4_2009_TheIslamicHumanRightsCommission.pdf

5. The WUC also prepared a list of 14 questions, which are expected to be raised to the PRC delegation during the upcoming UPR session UNOG by countries on behalf of the WUC. Together with other UPR reports, the WUC delegates submitted this list to the ambassadors of countries during lobbying efforts in Berlin and in Geneva.
6. In early December 2008, the WUC sent a communication detailing the responsibilities of all local Uyghur organizations and requesting them to:

   (1) Arrange meetings with the ministry of foreign affairs in their home countries, members of governmental and parliamentary human rights commissions, and UN Representatives on the Uyghur issue, submit WUC’s reports, and appeal to governments to raise the Uyghur issue during the upcoming UPR session on China.

   (2) Take action to reach representatives of foreign embassies in their country, communicate the WUC’s appeals, and explore the possibilities of whether the country would raise questions on Uyghur human rights issues to the Chinese delegation.

7. As a result, Uyghur organizations in Germany, Turkey, Holland, Norway, the USA, Canada, Australia and Belgium managed to meet with a number of officials in the ministry of foreign affairs of their home countries, Members of Parliament and their Working Groups on China, and representatives of some foreign embassies.

8. Lead by Mr. Dolkun Isa, a WUC delegation visited Berlin from January 6 to 13, 2009 for lobbying activities. (For more details please see above).

9. After a great deal of preparation, the WUC launched key activities in Geneva for the upcoming UPR session. Together with Ms. Agnes Vienna, program coordinator of the UNPO, Mr. Dolkun Isa made considerable lobbying efforts from January 25 to February 12 among scores of representatives of diplomatic missions in Geneva. Among those 35 countries, there were member countries to the UNHRC, neighboring countries of China, and scores of democratic countries in the western hemisphere. They were:

   Belgium, Slovakia, Korea, India, Estonia, Sweden, Greece, Denmark, Malaysia, the Czech Republic, Finland, Canada, the United States, Switzerland, Chile, Ireland, Germany, Holland, Japan, Indonesia, Azerbaijan, Afghanistan, the United Kingdom, Nigeria, Pakistan, Algeria, Portugal, France, Turkey, Guatemala, Italy, Australia, Norway, Jordan and Austria.

   Among the persons met during the talks, there were Ambassadors, Premier Representatives, Vice Representatives, Human Rights Consuls and Secretaries for Human Rights Affairs of the diplomatic missions in Geneva. The WUC team presented reports on serious human rights abuses of the Uyghur people by the PRC authorities, increased arbitrary detentions during and after the Beijing Olympic Games, the harsh crackdown of peaceful opposition by Uyghurs, and several urgent issues which need to be immediately addressed and raised in the upcoming UPR session. They also submitted reports and questions prepared by the WUC and the UNPO on those issues.
10. During the UPR meeting on China on February 9, a joint demonstration by the WUC and Tibetan organizations was staged in front of the UN Office in Geneva.

11. The UPR on China was the first review of China’s human rights record under the new UN mechanism, which came to effect in 2006, after the UN Commission on Human Rights (UNCHR), was replaced by the UN Human Rights Council (UNHRC).

Under this new mechanism, 192 countries in a 3-hour long UPR meeting will review the human rights records of individual countries. China’s human rights record was scrutinized between 9:00 to 12:00 on February 9, 2009. After the head of the Chinese delegation, Li Baodong, reported on China’s human rights situation, every country was allowed to give a 2 minute long oral statement on this report. According to the regulations, countries should register themselves prior to the UPR session. During the China review, a total of 115 countries registered to make an oral statement.
But, because of time constraints, only 60 countries were able to give statements on China.

Among those countries which made oral statements on China’s human rights record, Australia, Canada, the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Holland, Sweden, Switzerland, the Czech Republic, Italy, Austria, Japan and some Latin American countries made critical remarks.
http://lib.ohchr.org/HRBodies/UPR/Documents/Session4/CN/A_HRC_WG
6_4_L11_CHN_E.pdf

In addition, countries which couldn’t make an oral statement during the meeting because of time constraints, including Denmark, Norway, Latvia and Liechtenstein etc, made their criticism towards the human rights situation in China by submitting written statements through the UN Human Rights Council.
http://www.upr-
info.org/IMG/pdf/ADVANCE_QUESTIONS_TO_CHINA.pdf

Among those issues raised by the above counties either through oral or written statements, there were the issues of widespread torture in the Chinese judicial system, the death penalty, extra-judicial detentions, minorities issues, religious freedom, the rights of Uyghurs and Tibetans, media freedom, civil liberty, and safety of human rights defenders and lawyers, etc. They also called China to implement the UN International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (UNICCPR) which China signed in 1998. Furthermore, there were some questions on China’s new plan to implement its human rights record, which will be implemented in 2009.

12. From 15:00 to 17:50 on February 10, a meeting was convened between international human rights organizations including the WUC and several UN committees, such as the UN Committee on Civil and Political Rights
(UNCCPR), the UN Committee on Economic, Social, and Cultural Rights
(UNCESCR), the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination (CERD), the UN Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW), the UN Committee Against Torture (UNCAT), the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child (UNCRC), and the UN Committee on the Rights of All Migrant Workers and their Families (UNCMW).

The Chinese government sent a large delegation of 52 people, including high-level officials from the Chinese Foreign Ministry, the People’s Supreme Court, and the Supreme People’s Procuratorate, the Ministry of Public Security, the Ministry of State Security, and the State Administration for Religious Affairs, etc.

As the WUC team met with representatives of countries in Geneva, they were told that Chinese government officials had met with representatives of 192 countries and tried to get their support during the UPR session, or at least to hinder them from raising objections to China’s human rights record, by inviting them to luxury dinners. It was also a fact that the Chinese delegation exerted pressure on those representatives not to raise the issues of human rights violations against Uyghurs and Tibetans.

During the UPR meeting, once the speech of the Chinese delegation, Chief Li Baodong, ended, representatives of third world countries such as Pakistan, Sri Lanka, Saudi Arabia, Cuba, Algeria, Venezuela, Yemen and Vietnam etc, highly praised China’s human rights record. Some countries, on the other hand, chose to keep silent and smartly avoided angering China. But the diplomatic tricks of the Chinese government are not always so effective especially when it comes to the democratic western countries, which put the values of democracy and human rights first.

Another thing which drew broad attention during the meeting was that the Chinese government had distributed specially prepared, luxury-packaged propaganda DVDs titled “Xinjiang is a good place” to the representatives of countries. The Chinese government tried to mislead the public by decorating its brutalities in East Turkestan and on the Uyghur people.

Despite the disappointing fact that the number of countries which praised China’s miserable human rights record far more exceeded than those who have the courage to raise objections, still countries like the Czech Republic, Australia, Japan, Canada, and Switzerland all made special oral statements on the Uyghur human rights situation. In addition, the United Kingdom, Denmark, Sweden and Norway, etc. raised the issues of the Uyghur people by sending their questions to the Chinese delegation through the UNHRC. Nevertheless, with the help of those countries, the Uyghur issue was raised at a large-scale official UN meeting for the first time.

As a result of lobbying efforts and months long active engagement with the UPR process, a total 9 countries raised the Uyghur human rights issue through different means at the UPR meeting on China. It marks a major success that is a milestone for the Uyghur international human rights campaign.

4-5 February 2009

For years, the WUC has been actively communicating with officials of the German government and the Bundestag in order to discover if Germany would accept some of the Uyghurs in Guantanamo. After the U.S. President Barack Obama signed the executive order to close the Guantanamo prison camp, the future of the Guantanamo Uyghurs once again became a widely discussed topic in Germany. In this regard, the WUC leaders have made following efforts:

- On February 4, the issue of the Guantanamo Uyghurs was specially discussed during a parliamentary meeting of the Bavarian Landtag. Vice president Mr. Asqarjan made a comprehensive report to the more than 200 Members of the Bavarian Landtag on the situation of the Uyghur people and the Guantanamo Uyghurs and answered their questions in this regard. After hours of discussions, the Parliament decided to seriously consider the option of accepting some Uyghurs in Guantanamo as long as the United States government officially submits a request to the German Federal Government.

- Another heated discussion was held at the Munich Municipal Government meeting on February 5. Mr. Asqarjan has also made a speech on the Uyghur issue. At the end of the discussion, all factions of the German political parties within the Municipal Government made a unified decision to accept the Guantanamo Uyghurs in Munich. This decision was later submitted to the German Chancellor, Madam Angela Merkel, together with a brief written and signed by Mr. Christian Ude, the Major of Munich. ### 5 February 2009

Every year on February 5, the WUC commemorates the Ghulja demonstration, when hundreds of Uyghur youth went to the street and requested the Chinese government to give freedom, democracy and human rights to the Uyghur people. Like previous years, the umbrella organizations around the world organized several activities to commemorate this historical event.

In Washington, USA

A demonstration organized by the Uyghur American Association (UAA) was staged in front of the Chinese embassy. During the demo, Ms. Rebiya Kadeer made a speech to criticize human rights abuses of the Uyghur people by Chinese authorities.

In Munich, Germany

Organized by the East Turkestan Union in Europe, the Uyghurs in Munich protested at a famous tourist site in Munich city—the Karlsplatz Stachus. More than 1,000 leaflets on the Ghulja massacre and the situation of the Uyghur people were disseminated to spectators.

In Oslo, Norway

The Norwegian Uyghur Association organized a demonstration in front of the Chinese embassy in Oslo.

In Brussels, Belgium

The Belgian Uyghur Association and the East Turkestan Union in Holland jointly demonstrated in front of the European Parliament in Brussels. Demonstrators called on the European Parliament to exert pressure on the Chinese government to stop its repressive policies towards the Uyghur people.

In Ankara, Turkey

The East Turkestan Culture and Solidarity Association organized a protest in front of the Chinese embassy in Ankara. Representatives of human rights organizations and a number of Turkish politicians joined the demonstration. Demonstrators laid a dark wreath at the Chinese embassy.

In Toronto and Vancouver, Canada

The Uyghur Canadian Association staged demonstrations simultaneously in front of the Chinese consulates in Toronto and Vancouver.

In Stockholm

The Swedish Uyghur Association organized a demonstration in front of the Chinese embassy in Stockholm on February 1.

In Frankfurt, Germany

On February 7, members of the East Turkestan Union in Europe in Frankfurt gathered in Frankfurt city center to commemorate the Ghulja event. They disseminated hundreds of leaflets on the Ghulja massacre and the human rights situation of Uyghurs in East Turkestan to the public.

In Tokyo, Japan

Organized by the Japan Uyghur Association, more than 120 people including Uyghurs in Tokyo, members of human rights organizations and sympathizers of Uyghurs staged a demonstration in Shinbunya district in Tokyo. Journalists of several Japanese medias outlets interviewed Mr. Ilham Mahmut, president of the

More than 2,000 students attended this activity. www.eastTurkestan.org.au/uy/xewer/20090325001.htm</td>

| 26 March 2009 | An appeal was submitted to the U.S. President Barack Obama by the WUC. In its letter, the WUC appealed to the President to raise the Uyghur human rights issue
when he meets with Chinese president, Hu Jintao, and urged the Chinese government to stop its damaging policies, such as denial of economic prosperity to the Uyghur people, assimilation of the entire national by destroying its cultural identity and language, implementation of terror over the Uyghur people by arbitrary detention, and an unfair judiciary.

| 16-26 March 2009 | Ms. Rebiya Kadeer and Mr. Asqarjan made paid visits to Adelaide, Melbourne and Sydney. The Uyghur communities in these Australian cities warmly welcomed them. Several meetings were organized between WUC leaders and community members of Uyghur Diaspora during their visit. WUC leaders made reports on the activities of the WUC in recent years and updated preparations regarding the Third General Assembly of the WUC in Washington in May. Ms. Rebiya Kadeer spoke to the Diaspora and especially highlighted the ever-increasing attention of the international community towards the Uyghur issue as a result of the firm commitment and continuous efforts of the WUC. WUC leaders met with a number of Australian politicians including Members of the Australian Parliament, and government officials. During the talks, by briefing the current situation of the Uyghur people, Ms. Rebiya Kadeer appealed to the Australian government to accept some of the Uyghur in Guantanamo and to provide financial support for the Uyghur human rights campaign. On March 21, they also attended Newruz celebrations, which were organized by the East Turkestan Association in Sydney. During the WUC leaders visit to Australia, several Australian and Turkish media outlets interviewed Ms. Rebiya Kadeer and published articles. |

| 30 March 2009 | The WUC issued a press statement and harshly condemned the Chinese authority’s very recent crackdown on Uyghur dissidents in East Turkestan’s Hoten region, where they sealed off religious schools under the pretext of not having “Official Registration”, and put dissidents into custody simply because the authority deems them as a “security threat”. After this statement was published, a number of international media referred to it in their news reporting. |
WUC’s Submission to the UN Universal Periodic Review of the UN Human Rights Council

4th Session of the UPR Working Group,
February 2009

In this submission, the World Uyghur Congress and the Uyghur American Association (Uyghur Human Rights Project) provides information under the general guidelines for the preparation of information. The report was compiled and completed in Hawaii upon a visit of Rebiya Kadeer to the University of Hawaii during the conclusion of the Olympics in Beijing. The report is submitted on 1 September 2008.

The Uyghur people have faced systematic and severe human rights violations since contact and through waves of settlements by the Han Chinese in their homeland of East Turkestan.

For centuries and specifically since the mid-October 1949 invasion by the People’s Liberation Army under Wang Zhen, The Peoples Republic of China (PRC) instituted practices and policies to discriminate against Uyghur people and decrease the possibility for Uyghur exercise of the right to self-determination. Through every phase of occupation and organized denial of human dignity and equality, the Uyghur people resisted and reestablished East Turkestan to perpetuate the culture, language and continued existence of the ethnic Uyghur people as a collective identity.

For the previous 60 years, the PRC has coordinated a campaign of coercion and cultural desecration while continuously adopting international declarations enshrining human rights. From the Universal Declaration of Human Rights to the Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples, including numerous international human rights conventions, the PRC has adopted and ratified the international instruments. However, the rights have never been realized in the daily lives. In fact, life has worsened at the hands of the ruling authorities of Han descent from Beijing. This report will examine the actual violations of specific articles of these international instruments but also document the main challenging threats and continued gross human rights violations undermining the continued existence with dignity and equality of Uyghur society.

The Uyghur people maintain the fundamental freedom of right to life without discrimination able to perpetuate a unique culture in the face of growing persecution. The PRC continues to take advantage of current world trends from economic globalization to the war on terror to continue its illegal and immoral campaigns to dismantle the core of the Uyghur culture. Under the guise of economic progress, the PRC denies the language resulting in erosion of identity and discrimination in employment. Also, the PRC transfers young women destroying the family and future generations. Under the secrecy of security, the PRC eliminates Uyghur leadership through intimidation and imprisonment with techniques of torture to destroy the democratic aspirations recognized in rule of law and human rights.
The three areas requiring immediate attention are promotion and protection of Uyghur language, defending the survival of Uyghur women’s rights and the family, and protecting basic dignity denied in the war on terror.

The renaming of the Uyghur traditional sites is only the beginning. Language replacement covers the entire spectrum of society from television reports to textbooks gradually eroding Uyghur language. The rationale for denying the human right is defended with the benefits of modern education of science and technology denying the intrinsic worth of Uyghur culture.

The foundation for the language policy is reflected in the ideology of the Han government supremacy suffocating Uyghur identity. Based on centuries of stereotypes, China claims that Uyghur are inferior, culturally backward and lazy. The PRC policies guarantee Uyghur are second class citizens in their own homeland. The disparaging view of the Uyghur people is marginalizing Uyghur for generations to come through the monolingual educational system being set up today.

The arrow of assimilation is the “bilingual” education policy that cuts the tongue out of the collective Uyghur culture. This program buries the Uyghur language marginalizing Uyghurs in the educational system with the goal of eliminating it as a language of instruction.

All of the agreements with the establishment of the autonomous region are only on paper yet not in the reality of the people living under harsh conditions violating human rights. The right to be educated in one’s own mother tongue according to the Compulsory Education Law is being violated and Uyghur language is being marginalized. Even where there is more than 90% Uyghur people such as in Khotan, all classes will be taught in Chinese before the next report of the UPR is due for the PRC. From the top rings of education and government policies, the monolingual program is making its way all the way down to preschools in the immediate future. There are threats of trouble if parents don't agree to send their children to Chinese language schools. There are also economic conditions where parents that send their children to Chinese schools receive a subsidy. Beyond the corporate world and the classroom, the Uyghur language is banned in dormitories and even the playground of the preschools.

Results of these policies result in increasingly repressive political environment. Language is the seed for stability and human security in East Turkestan. An immediate reversal of the current policy is necessary for human rights in the region.

There are also “Xinjiang classes” in the PRC cities that remove Uyghur students from their cultural environment with the aspiration of “political thought training” not academic training. One indication of the true intent is the prohibition of speaking Uyghur even in the dormitories with an on site monitor. The number of such programs is increasing dramatically expanding every year suffocating the students to live their own culture through speaking their own language and living in one’s homeland.

This is also carried out to an even larger extent with young Uyghur women in slave standard factories removing them from their families and communities. While many of the programs previously mentioned have violated the human rights of Uyghur people, the transfer of women illustrates the trend of the PRC to always find new mechanisms to destroy the Uyghur culture.
The PRC central directive applies intense pressure incorporating intimidation, deception, pressure and threats from Beijing to break apart the creation of future families by focusing on traditional Uyghur cultural strongholds to transfer women to substandard working conditions very far from their traditional homelands across the PRC.

Families have documented the intentional targeting of marriage aged Uyghur women and the intimidation of fathers of families for the daughters participation in the program. When the woman arrive they face inhumane working conditions in substandard systems of slavery masquerading as government factory programs promoting economic progress. All of the promises of salaries and services do not exist. Women are forced to work for 24 hours straight. These economic imperialism conditions reflect plantations outlawed in earlier centuries in many colonizing countries. From tactics of fear to terrible force, more and more girls are taken from their families and transferred. The officials use promises of luxury or punishment if women are not willing to participate. Yet the result is impoverished young women facing even worse living conditions than the lack of economic opportunities offered to Uyghur in East Turkestan. It is a prison for women with economic gains for the PRC to produce cheap exports for the global economy.

Beyond the obvious economic and social rights violation of the women, there are also broader violations in the larger Uyghur society. When people protested the policy they were identified as terrorists and targeted for arrest and torture. This fits into the larger policy of harassment and human rights violations toward Uyghur people in their own homeland.

This is just the latest wave of population transfer. What is most insidious is not only is the PRC bringing Han in as in the past but actively siphoning off the young to leave their homeland too. In 1955, Uyghurs made up 74.4% of the total population and Han Chinese only 6.1%. Today it is almost evenly divided with Uyghur making up 45% and Han 41%. Even more alarming is this statistic doesn’t include the massive number of PLA soldiers, security forces and the recent migration of the migrant population for farming traditional Uyghur land.

With the introduction of the most recent population transfer of Uyghur women, the Uyghur will be a minority in their own homeland. Human rights must be honored.

The most insidious human rights violation is the rise of “Islamophobia” in the PRC. The PRC exploited the horrible terrorist attacks of 9/11 to create a reign of terror and torture against the Uyghur people in their own homeland and to vilify the Uyghur in the court of global public opinion using the global war on terror to intensify the repression of Uyghur leaders.

While the PRC is on record only days prior to 9/11 noting there is no terrorism there, the government has framed East Turkestan as part of the international terrorism struggle. The PRC has even been bold enough to claim that there were terrorist camps in operation justifying raids on Uyghur leaders whose only crime was standing up for basic human rights being respected in their homeland. The increased crackdown has linked Uyghur to the international rise of Islamophobia. Even Amnesty International has documented the tens of thousands of people detained and sentenced to death by the authorities. There are massive systematic roundups with follow up rallies of mass sentencing and even public executions. The Uyghur arrested during these sweeps face extremely cruel forms of torture.

Even Canadian citizens visiting their spouse’s families in neighboring countries haven’t been able to escape the wave of Islamophobia and terror targeting Uyghur people. Huseyin Celil is... just one case of human rights violations denying basic diplomatic and legal protections as well as enduring extreme torture.

The Islamophobia activities of the PRC are aimed toward silencing and creating a heightened sense of repression toward Uyghur people. Any Uyghur who stands up or speaks out faces the most egregious human rights violations. Rebiya Kadeer is an example. She served six years in prison. The torture didn’t end there though as the PRC targeted her children for her continued resistance as a human rights defender. Her sons Alim and Ablikim have been beaten in front of their children and endured great pain in prison for Rebiya Kadeer’s continued involvement in human rights efforts.

The main human rights violations of the UN CRC, CEDAW, ICESCR and CAT: Uyghurs desire for the realization of rights enshrined in international instruments.

Convention on the Rights of the Child

The Uyghur children are facing extreme and systematic discrimination in the current educational and governance system of China. The UN Committee on the Rights of the Child has initially scratched the human rights violations for young Uyghurs growing up in their own homeland at the hands of the policies. There are many recommendations that would change the direction of the discrimination to one of guaranteeing basic rights recognized in the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC). At the fortieth session, various important issues were raised relating to the recognized abuses by the Committee. The Uyghurs would like to have followup information but also plan to recognize the rights relating to indigenous children and youth in the UN CRC specifically art 17, 29 and 30.

The first steps would be to follow up with requested information and more importantly actions to reverse the lack of respect for Uyghur children.

Updated information is necessary for the government to provide to the UN Human Rights Council. The UN Committee on the Rights of the Child highlighted specific areas of concern. The CRC noted the Chinese government should provide in basic data and statistics item A on disaggregated data on budget allocation and trends focusing specifically on item 2(g) focusing on “programmes and services for children belonging to minority groups.” The information concerning para 5 and 7 focusing on disaggregated data on ethnic minorities such as Uyghurs focusing on health in para 5 specifically para (a) rates of infant and child mortality; (b) rates of immunization; (c) rates of malnutrition; (d) children infected with and/or affected by HIV/AIDS; (e) adolescent health, including early pregnancy and sexually transmitted infections (STIs), abortions, mental health and suicide, drug, alcohol and tobacco abuse: and (f) percentage of health professionals working in health-care services for children. Also para 7 with reference to right to education focusing on (a) rates of literacy, below and over 18 years; (b) rate of enrollment in pre-primary schools, primary schools and in secondary schools; (c) percentage of children completing primary and secondary education; (d) number and percentage of dropouts, repetition and retention; (e) number of children in private schools and (f) ratio teacher per children and number of children per class.

The Uyghurs note the system of denying the history of the Uyghur people in the textbooks as well as denying the language of Uyghurs to be spoken directly increases the rate of social ills in health and education.
The Uyghurs are extremely concerned on para 9 focusing on specific protection measures affecting Uyghur girl child and young women in relation to 9 (a) involved in sexual exploitation, including prostitution, pornography, trafficking and the number of children provided with access to recovery and recovery assistance. This is vital in connection with information regarding the transfer of young Uyghur women, especially recovery to return home to the East Turkestan.

Concerning general measures of implementation, the Uyghurs demand the ensuring of Uyghur children is guaranteed full opportunities to develop knowledge about their own language and culture. The Uyghur are eager to know about distribution and dissemination of the Convention and the state party report and in efforts made to provide training, awareness of the convention and on human rights in general, to children, parents, teachers, social workers and other professionals working with and for children in all parts of the state party. The Uyghurs demand the right to actively participate and also to distribute the Convention on the Rights of the Child in Uyghur. Also Part II where China was requested to provide copies of the text of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, the Uyghurs would want to provide the CRC if not already done so and secure the distribution without retaliation or further human rights abuses.

The Uyghur agree with the list of major issues specifically item 1 focusing on non-discrimination for ethnic minorities living in East Turkestan. Also item 3 focusing on freedom of religion in mainland China as Uyghur are denied this very right. Also item 10 accesses to education and specifically item 15 the situation of children belonging to ethnic minorities and the implementation of the Ethnic Regional Autonomy Act. If this autonomy act is similar to the one being violated at its very core today, the Uyghur demand one that reflects Uyghurs current disparity in social measures of dignity. The Uyghurs would propose a consultation and creation of autonomy acts that respect the principles of the CRC in this area as well as other international instruments China has ratified.

The Uyghur also believe a national human rights institution would be vital that included ethnic minorities as full members to ensure ethnic minorities’ representation and genuine participation.

CEDAW

Concerning the UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), there are items in the list of issues and question with regard to the consideration of periodic reports that relate directly to the violations of women’s rights in Xinjiang, China. At the thirty-fifth session, many points were raised by the Committee.

As noted by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women, the Uyghurs are deeply concerned about the “double discrimination” Uyghur women face. Concerning the list of issues mainly trafficking and exploitation of prostitution specifically para 6 and 7, the Uyghurs are concerned with the recent deception, pressure and threats relating to the phenomenon of the transfer of young Uyghur women to Eastern China from their homeland based on a new policy recruiting the girl child and young women that was not in full swing as it currently is when China last reported. Uyghur are extremely concerned and recommend more than the description in detail of the efforts undertaken to address this issue of internal trafficking of women. The current policy adds to the already recognized problem of internal trafficking. China must respond to the allegations noted in the Uyghur Human Rights Project report of February 2008.

The Uyghur are also concerned about stereotypes and educations specifically addressing the double discrimination of being Uyghur and also woman in China. The Uyghur women are denied basic rights due to perpetuation of stereotypes against women predominantly Uyghur women based on historical and cultural discrimination. New school textbooks must accurately reflect the Uyghur history, culture and language instead of the current textbooks making Uyghur invisible in their own homeland.

Also the area of employment is important. Uyghur people are denied employment opportunity. Uyghur women face double discrimination in this area. It is essential to provide information and more importantly programs to ensure the economic empowerment of women. It is also necessary to eradicate current policies that don’t allow Uyghur women employment opportunities. This is closely related to the area of the report focusing on rural women. The loss of land through transfer and confiscation even makes the situation more alarming concerning agricultural employment opportunities for Uyghur women.

ICESCR

The economic, social and cultural rights of the Uyghur people are essential to restore the full dignity of the Uyghur. Under the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the UN Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights recognized list of issues that relate to Uyghur rights.

The main issue and core important article is common article 1 of the ICCPR and ICESCR. The Committee noted and asked about to what extent is non-violent advocacy for self-determination by the officially recognized ethnic minorities – such as Uighurs considered lawful under the State party’s legal regime? The Uyghurs have been nonviolent in their advocacy since the initial policies in the region. The Uyghur are extremely concerned about the use of the war on terror to deny the right of self-determination. The review of the articles of ICESCR is very important as they outline the violations facing Uyghur people. During the previous review of China under the ICESCR more attention was paid to the Tibetan cause although Uyghur face similar discrimination under the articles listed raising concern by the committee such as Art 2.2 non-discrimination specifically para 8 on the systematic and institutional discrimination in the fields of employment, health care, education, housing and public representation.

The areas specifically cited concerning specific provisions of the covenant relating to article 6 and 7 focusing on the right to work is important and the right to just and favorable conditions of work relates specifically to Uyghurs falling in the economic prosperity. There are open signs that would not be tolerated in any society in the modern age noting Uyghurs need not apply for employment in windows of stores and businesses. The importance of article 15 is crucial. While mention focused on Tibetan and Mongol prefectures it is essential to apply the same standard to Uyghur. The measures to preserve and perpetuate the indigenous culture in the Uyghur homeland are important. Also specifically para 46 mentioned specifically the enjoyment on the right to freedom of religion as a dimension of cultural rights specifically mentioning the Uyghur people. Uyghurs are not only denied the option to the full realization of economic, social and cultural rights. But Uyghurs are arrested and detained for practicing their religious practices under their culture.
CAT

The Uyghur people are extremely concerned about the rights protected under the UN Convention Against Torture. The situation is so dire that the Uyghur insist the only measure that could curb the rabid abuse would be immediate ratification of the optional protocol. One of the other immediate actions that China must take would be the immediate release of prisoners of conscience for exercising their basic rights. The children of Rebiya Kadeer must be released unequivocally.

The Uyghur people have faced persecution since the initial contact. There has been intensification with the global war on terror. The PRC is in violation of Islamophobia along with the rising number of countries using the tragedy of 9/11 for own personal gain to intensify security crackdowns in their country.

CONCLUSION

This UPR report is hopefully a beginning of a genuine dialogue that would improve the human rights situation in East Turkestan to initiate a period of peace and prosperity for all. If the human rights recommendations are implemented children, women and families would be able to build a community that would flourish with these small freedoms reversing decades of discrimination. We encourage the governments of the world through this UPR process to do their due diligence in protecting and promoting human rights in East Turkestan. East Turkestan desires what all people want -- respect of religion not an excuse to be vilified with Islamophobia and protection of its vulnerable segment of society to reach their full potential and live in peace not exploitation for economic gains.

We humbly submit this information so the UN Human Rights Council can fulfill its mandate and human rights in East Turkestan can be improved.
The Unrepresented Nations and Peoples Organization (UNPO) has prepared this report in collaboration with the World Uyghur Congress (WUC) for the consideration by the Committee Against Torture (CAT) on the eve of their session on the fourth periodical report submitted to it by the People’s Republic of China (PRC) in line with the provisions as laid down in the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (hereafter “the Convention”). This report particularly focuses on the Muslim Uyghur population of East Turkestan (Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region, XUAR), considering the fact that minorities are at larger risk within the PRC of being subjected to torture. The embracement of Islam makes the Uyghur population a simple scapegoat under the justification of the “war on terror”.

Article 1 – definition of torture
Despite recommendations made by this very committee, which have been echoed by the UN Special Rapporteur on Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (hereafter “the Special Rapporteur”), the PRC has yet to bring their national law in accordance with the definition of torture within the Convention. A particular list of offenses has been deemed to relate to or result in torture, however, no overarching definition has been provided, leaving room for interpretation and loopholes for those that wish to do harm.

Article 2 – preventive measures – and Article 10 – education and information
With regards to the measures that the PRC is to take in order to prevent the occurrence of torture, it has become evident that law enforcement officers and other governmental officials burdened with the duties of maintaining public order are not sufficiently trained and penal measures against those that do inflict torture are not sufficiently in place. A culture of oppression thrives in detention centers, police stations and prisons in XUAR and torture as a means of racial discrimination is not sufficiently prevented. Even if the national legislation has laws and regulations in place with the aim of eradicating and criminalizing practices of torture, the implementation on the local level is severely lacking. Strengthening of the regional institutions and addressing flawed procedures can improve the dire situation.

1 The authors of this report subscribe to the definition of torture as has been laid down in Article 1 of the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman of Degrading Treatment or Punishment.
2 For more information on the lack of criminalization of torture, please see that paragraph on Article 5 of the Convention.
Article 3 – extradition in the face of torture

Apart from having an obligation under the Convention to prevent nationals from being extradited to states where they upon extradition may face torture, the PRC itself has instigated an active policy of forcefully returning Chinese nationals, even if they have received refugee status or asylum in another state. Upon return in the PRC national minorities, such as Uyghurs, are facing a severe risk of being tortured as a form of punishment in addition to sentencing those forcefully returned persons to long jail sentences of alleged crimes, usually relating to ‘subverting state power’, ‘separatism’, ‘undermining the unity of the country’ or involvement in the illegal communication of ‘state secrets’. Unfortunately, the PRC is not solely responsible for such acts, as other states, particularly those that are part of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO), willfully cooperate with such practices even in the face of torture.

Perhaps the most well publicized case of such force repatriation is Mr. Huseyin Jilil3, an ethnic Uyghur who had obtained Canadian citizenship after being recognized as a refugee in 2001. When visiting family in Uzbekistan, Mr. Jilil was detained in March 2006 and extradited by Uzbekistan to the PRC in June of the same year, without contacting the Canadian authorities. Throughout his detention, PRC officials denied his requests for consular assistance by the Canadian corps diplomatique. Testimonials of Mr. Jilil reveal that in the first two weeks of his detention in the PRC he was deprived of sleep and food and that he regularly received threats to his life if he refused to sign an official document, which was later to be used as his ‘confession’ to the charges against him for ‘plotting a split of the country’ and ‘joining a terrorist network’. Even though, the Convention states that ‘confessions’ obtained under torture cannot be admissible in a court of law as evidence, Mr. Jilil was convicted for these alleged crimes on the basis of this document. On 2 February 2007 Mr. Jilil faced trial and despite continued requests from his side, Canadian officials were not allowed to attend the trial. On 10 July 2007 Mr. Jilil's life imprisonment sentence was finalized, as the regional court rejected his appeal.

Article 4 – criminalizing torture

Over recent years, the PRC has adapted its national laws in order to criminalize torture. However, UNPO believes that most of these legislative changes have been made in regards to heavily publicized events. As such, these pieces of legislation are very particular as to method and person and as such do not encompass complete criminalization of torture. The status quo seems to have lead to a national legislation in which torture is a criminal offense only in certain cases and inflicted by certain (groups of) people, which is conduct inconsistent with the Convention.

One example torture which is not criminalized and rarely prosecuted in the PRC is forced abortion. In particular relation to the Uyghurs, forced abortion is used as a tactic of maintaining and even decreasing the population size. Since 1984, the PRC has carried out a coercive birth control and forced sterilization policies amongst the Uyghurs. Since then, under the pretext of ensuring a steady growth in “minority population”, “improving the quality of minorities”, and “eliminating economic inequalities”, the PRC has launched a series of extensive birth control and forced sterilization campaigns all over Eastern Turkestan targeting Uyghur women. Officially, the one child policy only applies to the ethnic nationalities with a population of over 10 million in PRC. With a population of 8.6 million, the Uyghur are regarded as a “minority nationality” in their land and are in theory not subject to the provisions of family planning legislation in PRC. But in practice, the birth control and sterilization policies have been actively promoted and encouraged by the PRC government in the towns and villages of Eastern Turkestan. Clearly such policies are not only discriminatory, but also inflict severe suffering – both mental and physical – upon the victims. Thus far, little action can be taken by Uyghur women as the system for complaints and remedies is also heavily discriminatory and those who do press charges or complain usually face imprisonment with elevated chances of being tortured when incarcerated.

In addition, the Special Rapporteur has indicated that the Re-education through Labor (RTL) constitutes a violation of the human rights to personal liberty and as such constitutes a form of inhumane and degrading treatment or punishment, which can even be considered mental torture, particularly in the light of the fact that RTL is used as a discriminatory punishment. Persistent reports have indicated that maltreatment is rampant in RTL facilities and that in particular ethnic minorities – such as the Uyghurs – are often targeted within these facilities. Furthermore, ethnic minorities are more often sentenced to serve time in such facilities for minor crimes then other Chinese citizens.

Article 11 – systematic review

Despite obligations under the Convention to conduct a systematic review of civil servants and their procedures with regards to suspects and detainees, reports received by UNPO indicated that such review – if conducted at all – is sincerely lacking. The bedrock for this lack of implementation is the lack of independence within the Chinese judicial system. Police, the office of the prosecutor and courts are functioning under the supervision of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) and are as such not operating independently. In addition, reports from abuse and ill-treatment in the RTL facilities, as well as the lack of responsiveness from the PRC with regards to the recommendations made by the Special Rapporteur in regards to the RTL, leads to suggest that these facilities are not subjected to regular intervals of independent review.

Article 12 – impartial investigation

Due to the lack of impartiality within the Chinese judicial system, no investigations have been conducted to verify the use of torture within the borders of the PRC. This has been confirmed by continues report that UNPO receives of death penalty in custody in several state institutions, these include RTL facilities, police detention centers and prisons. Many of these deaths are the result of poor treatment and torture while in custody. One of the latest examples is the death of Mutallip Hajim a wealthy Uyghur jade trader and philanthropist. In January 2008 Hajim was taken into custody by police in Hotan. On 3 March 2008 Hajim’s body was returned to his family. Police instructed his family to bury him immediately and inform no one of his death. Hajim was thirty-eight at the time of his death. Occasional reports in the Chinese media suggest that on rare occasions, perpetrators are punished for such violations, but in many more cases documented by networks of Uyghur human rights activists other NGOs, official investigations hardly take place and perpetrators are met with impunity. When an investigation does take place it does not meet the Conventions requirement.

Article 15 – exclusion of evidence obtained through torture from any proceedings

The Criminal Procedure Law (CPL) does not prohibit the use of confessions obtained through torture or poor treatment as evidence before the courts as required by the Convention. While revision of the law has been discussed, within China’s legislature, the National People’s Congress to this day has not introduced new laws that would explicitly prohibit the use of torture. The CPL has been amended over the years and should guarantee people no longer to be confronted with torture this is not the case. In several recent cases documented by UNPO, courts have ignored allegations made by defendants that they were subjected to torture or other ill-treatment in police custody. Most of these perpetrators enjoy impunity for their acts. The widespread use of torture in East Turkestan is confirmed by numerous reports based on interviews with Uyghur refugees who suffered torture.
Critical Situation of Uyghur Asylum Seekers

East Turkistan, also known as the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region of China, lies in the heart of Asia. The current territorial size of East Turkistan is 1,626,000 square kilometers (635,000 square miles). East Turkistan borders with China and Mongolia to the east, Russia to the north, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Tajikistan and Afghanistan to the west, Pakistan and India to the south, and Tibet to the southeast.

East Turkistan is the homeland of the Turkic speaking Uyghurs and other Central Asian peoples such as Kazaks, Kyrgyz, Tatars, Uzbeks, and Tjarks. According to the official surveys the population is 19.05 million by the end of 2002. The official numbers are, Uyghurs at 45.2 percent and the Han Chinese at 40.6 percent, with the Muslim Kazakhs running at 6.7 percent, Chinese accounts say the total population in 1949 was 4.33 million, of whom 75.9 percent were Uyghurs, 10.2 percent Kazakhs and only 6.7 percent Han Chinese.

Uyghur culture has evolved as a result of significant confluence of geographical, historical and religious factors over a two thousand year period. Geographically, the Uyghurs have always been at the very center of eastern and western cultures. Originally nomadic their settling at the hub of the historic Silk Road routes which ran through present day East Turkistan brought to them the eastern and western influences of China, Europe, North Africa, Russia, India and other areas, all going into a fantastic melting pot that became the Uyghur culture of today.

Manchu Empire invaded East Turkistan in 1876. After this invasion, East Turkistan was given the name Xinjiang, which means “New Territory,” and it was annexed into the territory of the Manchu Empire on November 18, 1884. This new name has been re-used since 1955 as Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region after the People’s Republic of China (PRC) annexed it.

Before the Communist Chinese military annexation of East Turkestan in 1949, the Uyghurs were successfully able to establish two independent East Turkestan: first in 1933 and later in 1944. But these independent republics were overthrown by the military intervention and political intrigues of the Soviet Union. In 1949 the Chinese Nationalist government (KMT) was defeated by the Chinese communists. After that, East Turkestan fell under Chinese Communist rule.

With the collapse of Soviet Union in 1991, the clouds of Cold War disappeared, giving birth to a number of independent countries such as Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Uzbekistan in the neighboring territories of East Turkistan. The Uyghurs were encouraged by the independence of their cultural brothers across the border. Their long-suppressed dream of having an independent, free, and democratic nation of their own, found new source of energy and hope. As a result, several Uyghur political organizations seeking self-determination, democracy and human rights for Uyghur people were formed almost all of these organizations have peacefully engaged in political, religious as well as cultural activities.

However, China, instead of listening to the legitimate grievances and demands of the Uyghur people, has violently suppressed Uyghur people’s peaceful activities. China has attempted to destroy Uyghur people’s social, cultural, and spiritual life by severely cracking down such activities. At present, the entire Uyghur community is living under a psychological trauma as a result of China’s harsh and violent policy. The notorious cultural-revolution style political campaigns that devastated Chinese society during the 1960s have been tormenting Uyghur people even after China made a major stride towards economic reform. Under different names such as “counter-revolutionary”, “local nationalist”, “separatist”, “illegal religious figure”, “fundamentalist” and “terrorist,” China has been destroying the very fabrics of Uyghur nation. Uyghur elites, intellectuals have been persecuted, large number of Uyghur youth have been arbitrarily arrested, jailed, and executed under all kinds of bogus charges. And some of them mysteriously disappeared.

Since the terrorist attacks of 9/11, the Chinese authorities have changed their tactics to attack the Uyghur people by taking advantage of the US led global war against terrorism. The Chinese authorities have intensified their suppression on peaceful Uyghur dissident and labeled them “terrorist” or “terrorist groups.” Claiming China a victim of terrorism, the Chinese authorities implemented heavy-handed policies arresting, torturing and executing peaceful Uyghur activists as “separatists, extremists or terrorists.”

Consequently, a number of Uyghurs have escaped China and fled to neighboring countries. Some of them escaped by using fake documents. Some of them escaped by crossing the dangerous mountainous routes which lead to Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Pakistan, Afghanistan, and Nepal. However, in spite of the harsh reality they faced at the hands of the Chinese authorities, and in spite of the difficult and risky long journeys, once these Uyghur escaped to the neighboring countries, they are being forcibly returned to China upon Chinese demands. So far, not a single neighboring country has ever offered asylum to a single Uyghur refugee. In fact, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Pakistan, Nepal and Russia forcibly returned peaceful Uyghur activists to China, violating the international law of non refoulement, where most of these extradited Uyghur were summarily executed upon return. This is absolutely against the principle of the UN Charters and relevant international human rights conventions.

The forcible repatriation of Uyghur refugees has increased especially after the formation of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO) which groups China, Russia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan and Tajikistan. Because of this, the politic activities of the Uyghur people in Central Asia have been great pressured in all these countries. Uyghur asylum seekers in both Kazakhstan and Kyrgyzstan face an ever-present risk of being detained by the police as “illegal immigrants”, which puts them in greater danger of being forcibly returned to China. According to Amnesty International, Kazakhstan may have forcibly returned around 20 Uyghurs and Kyrgyzstan around 50 Uyghurs in recent years. But the exact number is impossible to determine.

Kazakhstan

The Kazakhstan government forcibly returned Hamut Memet, Passim Mekhpir, and Iliac Cordon to China in February of 1999. Upon their forcible return to China, all of them were summarily executed, even though they were all peaceful activists who had participated in a peaceful demonstration against the Chinese repression of Uyghurs in February 1997.

In late 2001, two Uyghurs, Amat Memet (aged 21) and Turban Abbas (aged 27), both students from Yerkes county, Kashgar prefecture, went missing in Kazakhstan. We believe they have been forcibly returned to China. They had fled from East Turkistan in August 1999.
Critical Situation of Uyghur Asylum Seekers

In April or May 2003, Abdukakhar Idris, a Uyghur asylum seeker reportedly “disappeared” in Almaty, Kazakhstan. We believe he is forcibly returned to China.

On May 2006, the Vienna-based International Helsinki Federation for Human Rights said Yusuf Kadar Tohti and Abdulkadir Sidik, asylum seekers went missing in Kazakhstan after being released from a pretrial detention centre, where they had been held on accusation of possessing false passports and information of "an extremist character."

Kyrgyzstan;

The Kyrgyzstan government followed the same polices of the Kazak government.

On 23 May 2002, two Uyghurs, Memet Sidik (or Mamet Sidik) and Memet Basin (or Mamet Basin) were reportedly handed over to China by the Kyrgyz authorities. (ETIC report 2003, 5 Sept 2003, p.13, quoting Kyrgyz news agency)

On 31 March 2004, it was reported in the official Chinese media that two men, Rahmutulla Islamic and Darken Yakut, both Uyghurs from Urumqi, had been executed after being transferred to China from Kyrgyzstan in July 2002. (Xinhua, 30 March 2004)

In 12 March, 2001, three Uyghurs namely Ahmer Gunmen, Brahman Elmo, Esker Tohti, were sentenced to death and Ali Masum was sentenced to 25 years imprisonment by the supreme court of Kyrgyzstan.

On 31 December 2002 in the Kyrgyz capital, Bishkek, three Uyghurs, Ablimit, Tohti Nina and Kayser Jalap were reportedly sentenced to 16, 17 and 25 years in prison respectively for forming an “unlawful East Turkistan organization” and “illegal possession of weapons.”

In addition to these Uyghurs, Kyrgyzstan has covertly extradited a dozen Uyghurs to.

Pakistan;

In May 1997, Pakistan extradited 12 Uyghur political asylum seekers to China where they were summarily executed upon return. Most of these Uyghurs were young teenagers who fled to Pakistan in pursuit of spiritual wisdom and a freedom from political and religious persecution.

Pakistani Government has returned Ilham Tohti (born in November 15, 1971), Abdul Latin Abdulkadir (Born in Feb, 1972) Enver Davit in April, 2002 to China.

Abdulwahab Tohti and Muhammad Tohti Metrozi, two ethnic Uighur nationals, had gone missing on 16 July 2003 in Rawalpindi, northern Pakistan. Muhammad Tohti Metrozi was recognized as a refugee by the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) in December 2002. He was awaiting resettlement to Sweden and was due to travel there at the beginning of August 2003. They were secretly detained for three days by the Pakistani Intelligence Bureau in Rawalpindi and then deported to China.
Uyghur political prisoner Ismail Semed was executed on February 8, 2007 in Urumchi. Semed was 37 years old at the time of his execution, was sentenced to death in October 2005 on charges of “attempting to split the motherland” and other charges relating to the alleged possession of firearms and explosives. He fled to Pakistan in February 1997 following a peaceful demonstration in Ghulja, (Ch: Yining) which was brutally suppressed by Chinese security forces, resulting in hundreds, and possibly thousands, of deaths and injuries. Semed was deported from Pakistan to the PRC in 2003. The day before his execution, Semed’s wife and two young children, aged 6 and 7 years, were allowed to visit him to say their goodbyes. He told them that he had been tortured in prison, and that he was innocent of the charges against him. He informed them that he had been studying law in Pakistan at the time he was detained and extradited by Pakistani authorities.

Nepal and India;

From May 2000 to April 2002, a total of 16 Uyghurs fled China and arrived in Nepal in pursuit of refugee status. All of them had been peaceful activists in East Turkistan that Chinese state security apparatus ordered them to be arrested due to their political activities. Although their case was accepted by UNHCR in Nepal, and they were waiting for resettlement, but after China’s intervention, Nepal returned Shaheer Ali, Abdulla Satar, and Abdulhakim to China in February 2002. Among them Shaheer Ali was executed after upon return to China from Nepal. (According to a report on the official Chinese website www.tianshan.net on 21 October 2003). We don’t know what happened to other two persons since then. Has him Ali was returned to China by Nepal in May 2002. We were told that he was being tortured in Urumchi. According to credible sources, he too may get a death sentence. 7 of the 12 asylum seekers who had stayed in Nepal crossed into India and sought political asylum. Among them 4 asylum seekers have been resettled in Sweden by UNHCR, but other 3 are still waiting for resettlement.

Conclusion;

The Chinese government aggressively tracks and hunts down Uyghur political activists who are critical of China’s repressive policies imposed upon the Uyghur people, especially after 9/11. The Chinese authorities intend to silence the voice of the Uyghurs in exile in order to hide their gross, systematic and wide-spread human rights violations in East Turkestan. For that purpose, China pressures its neighbors to extradite Uyghur political activists who have fled to these countries, such as Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan, Russia, Pakistan and Nepal. Unfortunately, all of these states forcibly return Uyghur political activists back to China where they either face long sentence or summary execution without a just or fair trial. By forcibly returning these Uyghurs, China’s neighbors violate the international law of non-refoulement and other international human rights and refugee conventions.

Therefore, the World Uyghur Congress urges the international community, the United Nations, the European Union and the United States to pressure China’s neighbors to respect international law and do not forcibly return Uyghur asylum seekers and refugees to China. We believe that UNHCR plays the most important role in protecting and facilitating the resettlement of Uyghur refugees around the world.
A “Life or Death Struggle” in East Turkestan: Uyghurs face unprecedented persecution in post-Olympic period

The Uyghur Human Rights Project (UHRP) is extremely concerned that, following the Olympics and recent turmoil in East Turkestan (also known as Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region, or XUAR), Uyghurs living in the region will be subjected to an unprecedented level of persecution. Uyghurs throughout East Turkestan experienced widespread detentions and restrictions on freedom of movement prior to and during the Olympics, and official rhetoric by high-level regional authorities indicate that these measures will only intensify in the post-Olympic period. Reports of widespread arrests and detentions of individuals throughout East Turkestan have indicated that a massive clampdown on Uyghurs has already begun.

This report will examine recent accounts of harsh security measures in East Turkestan following a series of violent attacks in August; the security tactics that resulted in the broader persecution of Uyghurs during the Olympics and in the months leading up to the Olympics, in the name of anti-terrorism; and background on the persecution of Uyghurs in the name of the war on terror. It will then provide a set of recommendations to the Chinese government and the international community on how to preserve human rights in East Turkestan.

A series of three attacks targeted Chinese security forces and government agencies in Kucha and in Kashgar and nearby Yamanya in the first half of August. Reports indicate that a more recent incident occurred in Peyzawat [in Chinese, Jiashi] County near Kashgar on August 27, in which two unarmed Uyghur policemen were killed and at least two other Uyghur policemen were critically wounded in a knife attack.\(^1\) This incident was followed by reports that six of the suspected assailants in the August 27 attack and a previous attack were shot to death, and local residents’ accounts indicate the six suspects were shot after surrendering.\(^2\)

A “life or death struggle” was announced by Xinjiang Party Secretary Wang Lequan on August 14, following the first three attacks. In a speech, Wang stated that security forces must “stick to a strategy of seizing the initiative to strike preemptively, closely guard against and attack separatist sabotage by the three forces and never allow our enemies to gain strength.”\(^3\) In addition, recent media reports have cited evidence of Chinese government plans to crack down with military pressure in East Turkestan in the coming months, including a report stating that “the enhanced military action would begin immediately after the Olympics end on the 24th, when the world’s attention will no longer be focused on China’s human rights record”.\(^4\) A new report from the Hong Kong-based Information Center for Human Rights and Democracy states that around 200,000 public security officers and armed police have been mobilized in East Turkestan to “prevent terrorist attacks” on China’s National Day, observed on October 1.\(^5\) The group also cites official orders allowing for the family members and even neighbors of suspected terrorists to be punished, in areas such as Kashgar and Hotan.\textsuperscript{6} If this report is accurate, it represents the largest mobilization of security forces in East Turkestan since forces were mobilized in early April 1990 to quell the Baren uprising.\textsuperscript{7}

Wang, a Han Chinese member of the Politburo, has served as Party Secretary of the XUAR since 1994. His tenure as provincial Party chief has already far exceeded the 10-year term limit stipulated by the Party. Wang has presided over a period of political repression and extremely rigid social controls for Uyghurs in East Turkestan, and has spearheaded a drive to blur the distinction between peaceful dissent and terrorism in the region.

Political Consultative Committee head Zhu Hailun stated at a televised news conference on August 18 that government forces must “Strike Hard” at the three evil forces [terrorism, separatism, and extremism], and mobilize the masses to guard against these forces at all levels of society.\textsuperscript{8} “Strike Hard” campaigns are used by Chinese officials in East Turkestan to stifle political dissent, and they have been utilized as an effective tool in the latest wave of repression against Uyghurs, including “Strike Hard” campaigns launched in recent months in the cities of Ghulja and Artush.

Traditionally, “Strike Hard” campaigns in East Turkestan are known to exacerbate Chinese government authorities’ tendency to over-state the seriousness of a perceived crime. “Strike Hard” campaigns are generally typified by arbitrary punishments, accelerated judicial procedures and an increased use of the death penalty.

Information obtained by UHRP indicates that ongoing security measures have targeted and will continue to target large numbers of Uyghur civilians, including many not suspected of involvement in any crime, in contravention of Chinese law and international law. In addition, UHRP is concerned that such measures may be accompanied by torture and other forms of state-sponsored violence. Uyghurs in government custody frequently suffer from physical abuse and other forms of severe maltreatment. Torture and forced confessions are an extremely prominent feature of most Uyghurs’ experiences at the hands of the police and judiciary in East Turkestan. As UN Special Rapporteur Manfred Nowak stated following a visit to East Turkestan in 2005, documented torture allegations from China have included “a consistent and systematic pattern of torture related to ethnic minorities, particularly Tibetans and Uighurs, political dissidents, human rights defenders, practitioners of Falun Gong, and members of house-church groups.”\textsuperscript{9}

UHRP is also gravely concerned about the reported detention of children, which has already been reported to have occurred following the recent attacks. UHRP is also concerned that many of those detained in security sweeps have been denied or will be denied access to proper legal counsel.

“Some of my worst fears about the Chinese government’s intent to use security as an excuse to detain innocent Uyghurs, including children, are now being realized,” said Uyghur freedom movement leader Rebiya Kadeer. “While I knew the Chinese government was capable of such a massive crackdown, I hoped I would never see repression on such a broad scale.”

A report issued recently by the organization International Campaign for Tibet (ICT) documents the existence of a similar crackdown in Tibet, following March 2008 demonstrations that were largely peaceful. Tibetan areas remain closed off to foreign reporters and most overseas tourists. Disappearances, detentions and severe religious restrictions have been widespread throughout Tibet since March. As the report observed, “Hu Jintao’s leadership… has imposed a brutal crackdown that owes more to the political extremism and paranoia of the Maoist era than to a 21st century would-be superpower.”

Children targeted

According to information obtained by UHRP, following the attacks in Kucha and Kashgar, 160 Uyghur youths who were living and studying religion in a Hui Muslim area in Yunnan Province were arrested by police dispatched by the Public Security Bureau in East Turkestan. The youths, ranging in age from 8 to 14 years old, were brought to Urumchi and held in Bajiahu Prison. When the parents of these children asked authorities for their release, 10 of the children were released after their parents paid 20,000 Yuan each, and the children of those parents who could not afford such a sum are still being detained. The parents of the 150 children remaining under detention have been told by police that the children will be brought to court and sentenced for the crime of participating in “illegal religious activities”.

According to Radio Free Asia (RFA), the new village police chief of Misha village stated that the eight-year-old son of a woman suspected in the Yamanya attack was being held in police custody, together with the suspect’s 50-year-old mother, as the suspect herself remained at large. “We have her eight-year-old son in custody,” RFA quoted new Misha village police chief, Mamet Ali as saying. “We also have Amangul [her mother] in custody… Anargul is a key person for us to arrest the others. That is why we have her son.”14 The RFA report also quoted Misha village’s propaganda chief as stating “In Misha village alone, about 2,000 people including 500 troops, 300 armed police, and 400 government employees and paramilitary” had been mobilized to search for suspects in the Peyzawat attack (also suspected in the Yamanya attack).

Family members and associates of alleged attackers detained, including 10-month old baby

UHRP has learned that the family members of Ehmetjan Tohti, who was killed during the attack in Kucha, have reported that his 10-month-old baby has been taken away by police to an undisclosed location. Mr. Tohti’s wife, Bumeryem, the mother of the baby, was also killed in the attack. Local authorities have refused to give any information about the baby's whereabouts to Mr. Tohti’s relatives. In addition, despite maintaining their innocence of any crime related to the attacks, Mr. Tohti’s 60-year-old father Tohti Tay, his mother, his younger brother Musajan Tohti, his older brother Memet Tohti and his sister have also been arrested. Memet Tohti’s sister was recently released, but the present situation of the other family members remains unclear.

UHRP has also learned that police have also reportedly detained Bumeryem’s older sister, a businesswoman who was running a supermarket business called “Ihlas Soda Baziri” in Kucha. All of her 30 employees were also arrested. Despite the fact that the sister and her employees have maintained they had no connection with the attacks in Kucha, they are still being held in local detention centers.

Security sweeps throughout Kucha and Kashgar

According to other reports received by UHRP, the deputy minister of the Ministry for Public Security has set up a special working group in Kucha County to carry out post-attack security sweeps in Kucha and in Kashgar. More than 1,000 individuals have reportedly been arrested in these sweeps, and numerous other individuals have been temporarily held in local government buildings in several villages in the region.

Very dense checkpoints have reportedly been set up by security and military forces in each village in the Kucha area. UHRP has documented reports of residents describing the presence of armed vehicles and the People’s Armed Police patrolling the streets of Kucha and Kashgar. The Associated Press stated that “authorities declared virtual martial law” in Kucha after the attacks.15

Local residents are reportedly forbidden from traveling freely, even within their own towns. According to local residents, there are 5-6 checkpoints on the way from one town to the county center of Kucha. In addition, local government authorities have ordered law enforcement officials in the area to check each individual who goes to a mosque for prayer. Also, those who pray secretly in their homes have reportedly also been targeted for “political examination”.

UHRP has also learned that residents of Kucha state that following the August 10 attack in the city, all employees of ten different restaurants in Kucha’s Old City were arrested. UHRP estimates the total number of employees arrested to be in the range of 200 to 300.

One of the people arrested in the sweeps in Kucha County is Adil Qarim, who is the imam of a local mosque. Qarim maintains that he had no connection to the recent attacks, but one of the attackers attended the mosque he leads. The local court of Kucha County has reportedly sentenced Adil Qarim to life in prison.

Additional information indicates that throughout Kucha, all young people who have traveled abroad before have been rounded up and detained. This was reported to have begun during the Olympics, but intensified after the start of the Olympics.

Internet access has reportedly also been heavily restricted in Kashgar following the attacks in the city.

Detentions in Korla

According to UHRP’s information, all non-resident Uyghurs in the city of Korla have been detained, and have been told that they will be released after the Beijing Olympics are over. UHRP has no information to indicate that these Uyghurs have been released from detention. The detention of non-resident Uyghurs in Korla began following the attacks in Kucha on August 10.

Heavy security in Urumchi

Local residents have reported the presence of armored vehicles in the regional capital of Urumchi, including in front of the Rebiya Kadeer department store. Employee IDs are required to be shown by those employed in the vicinity of the department store. In addition, numerous detentions have also been reported to have occurred as part of security sweeps in Urumchi.

Uyghurs pushed out of Beijing

The crackdown on Uyghurs also spread beyond East Turkestan to areas of the PRC outside the region. The Bloomberg News Service stated that Uyghur residents of Beijing complained of “being pressured to leave” the city, and numerous media reports have indicated that non-resident Uyghurs have been expelled from the city. The local authorities have denied these reports, but the Uyghur community in Beijing has continued to report incidents of harassment and expulsion.

reports have stated that Uyghurs and Tibetans were not allowed to stay at hotels or guesthouses in Beijing prior to and during the Olympics.\(^{17}\)

Stepped up executions in 2008

UHRP has received information that, since the beginning of 2008, the sentences of many Uyghurs who have been given death sentences with a two-year reprieve have been changed to regular death sentences, and they have been executed. Traditionally throughout the People’s Republic of China (PRC), individuals given a death sentence with a two-year reprieve who have exhibited “good behavior” have had their sentences commuted to life in prison (according to Chinese law, such sentences should be commuted to life unless the prisoner commits a crime during the two-year period and is subsequently tried and convicted of that crime.) Up to several hundred Uyghurs who had been given two-year reprieve sentences may have been executed since January 2008, according to UHRP’s information. These individuals had been held at prisons throughout East Turkestan, and may have been comprised of both political criminals and common criminals.

Urumchi raid; executions in Kashgar

On July 9 in Urumchi, five young Uyghurs were shot and killed without warning in an unjustifiable show of force on an alleged "religious extremist" group, and two Uyghurs were executed in Kashgar after their sentences were read in front of an audience of 10,000 Uyghurs forced to attend a mass rally.\(^{18}\) No evidence, however, has been put forth to support officials’ allegations that these Uyghurs were involved in terrorist activities.

Passport confiscation

UHRP has learned that in the run-up to the Olympic Games, Uyghurs’ passports were almost universally confiscated throughout the PRC, and it is unclear when these passports will be returned. Residents of East Turkestan have indicated that Uyghurs’ passports were confiscated in the spring of 2008. Officials in East Turkestan confirmed they had confiscated the passports of Uyghurs in June 2007, apparently in a bid to prevent them from making a pilgrimage to Mecca.\(^{19}\) This official action was taken immediately following an announcement by Wang Lequan that authorities were launching a crackdown on “illegal pilgrimages”\(^{20}\).

Torch relay

\(^{17}\) China intensifies crackdowns before Olympics, Toronto Globe and Mail, June 12, 2008.

A heavy security presence accompanied the passage of the Olympic torch in East Turkistan in June 2008, including police checks of vehicles, numerous snipers and warnings to residents to stay inside their buildings with their windows shuttered. UHRP has learned that a seal was reportedly placed over the windows of Uyghurs’ homes along the torch route, and these Uyghurs were told that if the seal were found to be broken, they could be charged with a crime. Uyghurs were also told to keep watch on their neighbors in these areas, and to report any suspicious activity.

The same sources informed UHRP that Uyghurs in the cities hosting the torch were told to avoid contact with foreigners, especially foreign journalists. Government authorities in East Turkistan vetted the small number of Uyghur participants and spectators involved in the torch relay, warning that the government would reprimand any Uyghurs who discussed topics perceived as sensitive with members of the press. These Uyghurs were told that, if they disobeyed the warnings, they could be charged with the crime of “revealing state secrets”.

March protests in Hotan

Government authorities clearly hoped to project an image of harmony and unity along with the torch relay, and prevent any public displays of dissent among local Uyghurs. But peaceful protests against systematic violations of human rights, such as a demonstration of hundreds of Uyghur women in the city of Hotan in late March, exposed discontent among Uyghurs, contrary to government propaganda.

Speaking at a news briefing following the attack in Peyzawat, Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Qin Gang told reporters "People of various ethnic groups coexist in harmony and equality, and the situation in Xinjiang is generally good." Qin went on to say “This has nothing to do with any alleged persecution or oppression of the Uighur people.”

Uyghur residents of East Turkistan indicated that the death of a prominent local businessman and philanthropist while in custody had been one of the motivations behind the Hotan demonstration. Other demands cited include dissatisfaction over a proposed ban on headscarves in the city, together with calls for an end to the government-sponsored torture of Uyghur dissidents.

Religious repression

The closure of at least one mosque has been reported in recent months\(^27\), and the destruction of another mosque was apparently due to parishioners’ refusal to post Olympics slogans on its walls.\(^28\) Uyghur imams were ordered to undergo “political education” regarding the Olympics. In addition, the World Uyghur Congress has stated that East Turkestan authorities plan to hold a 40-day 'Strike Hard' campaign in September, coinciding with the Muslim holy month of Ramadan.\(^29\)

Ghulja Massacre of 1997

The Chinese government has a history of using security threats in East Turkestan as a pretext for much broader crackdowns on human rights in the region. On February 5, 1997, thousands of Uyghurs, mostly young men, took to the streets of Ghulja and marched to the Ghulja Municipal Government offices. They were demanding equal treatment, religious freedom, and an end to racial discrimination. Armed paramilitary police confronted the unarmed demonstrators with batons, tear gas and high-pressure water sprayed from fire trucks. Eyewitnesses report that Chinese police fired indiscriminately into the crowd, killing as many as 30 Uyghur demonstrators and wounding more than 100 on the spot.

In the period immediately following February 5, 1997, thousands of Uyghurs were detained on suspicion of participating in the demonstration. In some cases, family members of those who had participated were also detained. Dozens and possibly hundreds of Uyghurs were executed, some in public, following summary trials. Many others were sentenced to lengthy prison terms including life on charges of ‘hooliganism’. Other people simply disappeared, and are assumed to be either in prison or dead, their remains disposed of without their families being informed. Reports indicate that hundreds of Uyghurs suspected of involvement in the Ghulja demonstrations were executed between 1997-1999.

Political persecution of Uyghurs in the era of the “war on terror”: persecution from 2001-2008

Over the past seven years, using “terrorism” as a justification, Beijing has undertaken a renewed, systematic, and sustained crackdown on all forms of Uyghur dissent. As is common in the PRC justice system, those arrested in these campaigns frequently suffer from physical abuse and other maltreatment while in government custody. In addition, they are often subject to nontransparent trials and denied access to independent counsel. Convictions are regularly obtained on the basis of forced confessions extracted through torture. Security forces target Uyghurs who express any type of dissent as they “strike hard” against the “three evil forces” of “separatism, terrorism, and extremism.” Reminiscent of the Chinese proverb “killing the chicken to scare the monkey,” these activities are calculated to send a strong and intimidating message to the Uyghur population.

Since 9/11, Amnesty International has documented that, under these types of campaigns, “tens of thousands of people are reported to have been detained for investigation in the region, and hundreds, possibly thousands, have been charged or sentenced under the Criminal Law; many Uighurs are believed to have been sentenced to death and executed for alleged “separatist” or “terrorist” offences.” According to a scholarly paper from a 2001 Ministry of Justice compendium, one out of eleven convicted Uyghurs are in prison for “state security crimes.”

It was reported in April 2007 that the Xinjiang and Tibet Working Groups had been established specifically to handle Uyghur and Tibetan separatism. Luo Gan, Secretary General of the Central Political and Legislative Committee, leads the Xinjiang Working Group, with Vice Premier Hui Liangyu and Central Political Bureau member and XUAR Party Secretary Wang Lequan acting as deputy group leaders. All three are widely seen as holding hard-line views.

In addition to the two working groups, the State Ethnic Affairs Commission announced in March 2007 the creation of a new mechanism to monitor the activities of certain ethnic groups, especially Uyghurs and Tibetans, in order to “deal with emergencies resulting from ethnic issues.” According to Dainzhub Ongboin, vice director of the Commission, the monitoring group represents “a major step in the central government’s efforts to develop the country’s ethnic minorities.” However, one stated goal of this “development method” is to “clamp down on ethnic separatism so as to safeguard ethnic unity, social stability, and national security.”

Uyghurs who are arrested during “security” sweeps often suffer in government custody. Amnesty International has documented a number of extremely cruel forms of torture used by PRC authorities, including “severe beating and kicking; the use of electric batons; the use of handcuffs, shackles or ropes to tie prisoners in positions which cause intense pain; and exposure to extreme cold or heat.” Other torture methods used in East Turkestan are “unidentified injections which cause the victim to become mentally unbalanced or to lose the ability to speak coherently; the insertion of...”

pepper or chili powder in the mouth, nose or genital organs; and the insertion of horse hair or wires into the penis.”

Recommendations for the Chinese government

Cease terror-related security clampdowns aimed at the broader Uyghur population.
Immediately release all Uyghur individuals who were detained without evidence of criminal culpability.
Provide a detailed accounting of all individuals’ detention, as well, as the charges against them.
Allow access to East Turkestan for independent human rights experts, such as United Nations officials, to investigate reports of human rights abuses and terror allegations.
Release evidence of all recent terror allegations.
Return passports to Uyghurs that were confiscated in violation of Chinese law.
Revisit and acknowledge failed minority policies, particularly in East Turkestan and Tibet.
Recognize that harsh treatment will not help to achieve security of China proper.
Provide channels for legitimate grievances to be heard in East Turkestan.

Recommendations for the international community

Call upon the Chinese government to end repressive security measures aimed at the Uyghur population in East Turkestan.
Urge PRC authorities to initiate negotiations with Ms. Rebiya Kadeer, Uyghur democracy leader, to peacefully resolve the East Turkestan issue.
Call upon the Chinese government to conduct transparent judicial processes in regard to cases involving Uyghurs.
Call upon the Chinese government to produce evidence of terror allegations against Uyghurs and the presence of contacts between Uyghurs and global terror networks.
Establish a group of experts to independently assess any evidence produced by the Chinese government to prove terror allegations against Uyghurs and the presence of contacts between Uyghurs and global terror networks.
Send representatives to East Turkestan to investigate human rights abuses and Chinese government allegations
Enforce compliance by the Chinese government to international human rights obligations through the treaties bodies system at the United Nations.
Who are the Uyghurs?

Uyghurs (alternatively spelled Uighurs, Uygurs) are an ethnically and culturally Turkic people living in East Turkestan, called the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region in Chinese, a vast area constituting one-sixth of the total land area under the control of the People’s Republic of China. Uyghurs have a rich cultural history going back almost 4,000 years. Before embracing Islam in the tenth century, Uyghurs believed in Buddhism, Manichaeism, and Nestorian Christianity. Today, Uyghurs practice a moderate form of Sufi Islam and lead predominantly secular lives.

East Turkestan has a long and distinctive history, enhanced by its position along the Silk Road, bridging mainland China and the ancient Arabic, Persian and European cultures to the west. Today, the population of approximately 19 million includes several Turkic-speaking Muslim ethnic groups, of which the Uyghurs, numbering more than eight million, are the largest.

Uyghurs in East Turkestan have struggled for cultural survival in the face of a government-supported influx of Chinese migrants, as well as harsh repression of political dissent and any expression, of their distinct identity, however lawful or peaceful. As a result of Chinese government policies, the percentage of ethnic Chinese in East Turkestan has grown from four percent in 1949 to more than 40 percent at present, constituting some 7.5 million people.

Reports from East Turkestan document a pattern of abuse including political imprisonment, torture, and disappearances. With only a few extremely rare exceptions, Uyghurs continue to be the only population in China consistently subjected to executions for political and religious offenses. Mosques are summarily closed and the Uyghur language is banned from use in schools. Uyghurs are subjected to compulsory unpaid labor on infrastructures, such as oil or gas lines to transfer East Turkestan’s resources to mainland China.

Over the past six years, PRC officials have maneuvered to use the concept of “terrorism” as a justification for their repressive treatment of Uyghurs in East Turkestan1 (also known as Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region or XUAR) and to intimidate Uyghurs who have fled China. This report documents that the PRC government has:

- Placed tremendous emphasis on the threat of “terrorism” in East Turkestan, without providing credible evidence of a threat.
- Initiated a series of “security” campaigns in East Turkestan that have resulted in serious human rights abuses.
- Used its influence within the Shanghai Cooperation Organization to seek the return of Uyghurs from China’s neighboring countries in violation of international law.
- Attempted to influence overseas Uyghur activists by harassing their family members who remain in East Turkestan.

I. Questionable Assertions:
“Terrorism” as an Excuse for Intimidation and Repression

Shortly after the attacks of 9/11, public statements by PRC authorities signaled the official decision to use the “global war on terror” to intensify repression of the Uyghur people. On September 1, 2001, the XUAR Regional Government Chairman Abdulahat Abdurixit said in Urumqi, “By no means is Xinjiang a place where violence and terrorist incidents take place very often,”2 and just a week before 9/11, XUAR Communist Party Secretary Wang Lequan told a group of Hong Kong investors that “Xinjiang is not a place of terror.”3

Two months later, then Foreign Minister Tang Jiaxuan stood before the UN and asserted that “East Turkestan terrorist forces have long received training, financial aid and support from international terrorist groups... East Turkestan is... a part of international terrorism and should be resolutely fought against." This speech marked the beginning of a PRC campaign to use the concept of “terrorism” against the Uyghur people of East Turkestan.

1 Use of the term ‘East Turkestan’ does not define a ‘pro-independence’ position. Instead, it is used by Uyghurs wishing to assert their cultural distinctiveness from China proper. ‘Xinjiang’, meaning ‘new boundary’ or ‘new realm,’ was adopted by the Manchus in the Qing dynasty (1644-1911) and reflects the perspective of those who gave it this name. This use of terminology, whether ‘Xinjiang’ or ‘East Turkestan,’ is often compared by Uyghurs to use of the term ‘Tibet’ by Tibetans. That is, Tibetans use the name they choose, and not a translation of the Chinese ‘Xizang,’ meaning ‘western treasure-store.’ Uyghurs also choose to use a name other than the one designated by the Chinese authorities.

Chinese authorities began lobbying for an obscure group known as the East Turkestan Islamic Movement (ETIM) to be labeled as a terrorist organization. Immediately after 9/11, the Bush administration warned the PRC government not to use the event to persecute Uyghurs, refusing to link any Uyghur group to terrorism. Nearly a year later, in August 2002, in an abrupt change in policy, the U.S. government designated ETIM as a terrorist organization.

In making this announcement, the US State Department cited, almost verbatim, the PRC government’s accusations against ETIM, and in fact mistakenly went even further than PRC authorities by attributing all of the violent incidents that the government claimed had taken place in East Turkestan in the past decade to ETIM. This announcement was criticized by several experts at the time. A few weeks later, on the second anniversary of 9/11, ETIM was placed on the UN terrorist list.

The move came just in advance of the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq, leading several independent experts to see the change as directly related to the impending war. Willy Wo Lap Lam, a prominent China scholar, wrote at the time, “Washington realizes that if it were to sponsor a UN resolution that involves the invasion of Iraq, it will need, at the very least, an abstention rather than a veto from China, one of the Security Council’s five permanent members.” In Lam’s analysis, “the decision by the U.S. and UN to label ETIM a terrorist outfit could afford Beijing much-needed legitimacy in its campaign to snuff out the entire pro-independence and dissident movement in the XUAR- and to Sinicize the region by promoting Chinese culture and encouraging Han Chinese to migrate to Xinjiang.”

Official PRC government documents and statements frequently use vague and generic terms such as “East Turkestan terrorist organization” or “East Turkestan terrorist force,” implying that a unified and strong group of terrorists exists. Hundreds of official speeches, reports, and news articles discussing East Turkestan use the “terrorist” designation. However, many observers have questioned the legitimacy of these types of PRC government claims. In his comprehensive analysis of violence and “terrorist” groups in East Turkestan, Georgetown University professor James Millward concluded that “the notion of an imminent terrorist threat in Xinjiang or from

The PRC government has also labeled nearly all Uyghur organizations as terrorist groups, regardless of their violent or non-violent nature. In late 2003, China’s Ministry of Public Security released a list that gave the “terrorist” label to ETIM, the East Turkestan Liberation Organization (ETLO), the East Turkestan Information Center (ETIC), and the World Uyghur Youth Congress (WUYC). With the temporary exception of ETIM, none of these organizations have been recognized as “terrorist” by any other country in the world.

On several occasions, the PRC government has raised the specter of terrorism, without providing corresponding evidence. In August 2005, Chinese authorities warned a visiting delegation from the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom that “elements of Al-Qaeda” were targeting them. The Commission later determined that this claim was used to “restrict Commission activities and to monitor its contact with local people not approved by the government.” In June 2006, the Chinese diplomatic mission in Pakistan claimed that “members of the East Turkestan Islamic Movement” were planning to kidnap senior Chinese diplomats and consular officers in the country. However, no evidence was presented.

The most dramatic claim was the announcement that PRC authorities raided on a “terrorist camp” near the village of Kosrap, in the mountainous region of the Pamir Plateau on January 8, 2007. This raid was said to have resulted in the death of 18 and the capture of 17 ETIM members. Dru Gladney, president of the Pacific Basin Institute and an expert on Uyghurs and other Muslims living in the PRC, stated his doubts that ETIM was involved, saying that the organization “dropped out of sight with the death of its reputed leader, Hassan Mahsun,” who was killed in 2003 by Pakistani security forces. PRC authorities have yet to provide documentation of this alleged terrorist camp.

II. PRC “Security” Campaigns in East Turkestan: Intimidation, Arrests, Torture, and Executions

Over the past six years, using “terrorism” as a justification, Beijing has undertaken a renewed, systematic, and sustained crackdown on all forms of Uyghur dissent. As is common in the PRC justice system, those arrested in these campaigns frequently suffer from physical abuse and other maltreatment while in government custody. In addition, they are often subject to non-transparent trials and denied access to independent counsel. Convictions are regularly obtained on the basis of forced confessions extracted through torture.

Security forces target Uyghurs who express any type of dissent as they “strike hard” against the “three evil forces” of “separatism, terrorism, and extremism.” Reminiscent of the Chinese proverb “killing the chicken to scare the monkey,” these activities are calculated to send a strong and intimidating message to the Uyghur population. For example, in the fall of 2005, on the eve of the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region, Luo Gan, China’s most senior law official, in charge of law enforcement for the Standing Committee of the Politburo, urged XUAR authorities to prepare for danger and renew their campaign against separatism.20 Luo encouraged armed police to “keep improving their abilities of dealing with emergent events and fighting against terrorism as well as increasing combat and defense capabilities.”21

Since 9/11, Amnesty International has documented that, under these types of campaigns, “tens of thousands of people are reported to have been detained for investigation in the region, and hundreds, possibly thousands, have been charged or sentenced under the Criminal Law; many Uighurs are believed to have been sentenced to death and executed for alleged “separatist” or “terrorist” offences.”22

According to a scholarly paper from a 2001 Ministry of Justice compendium, one out of eleven convicted Uyghurs are in prison for “state security crimes.”23 The state-run Xinjiang Daily reported that, in 2005 alone, 18,227 individuals were arrested in East Turkestan for endangering state security, a jump of 25 percent from the previous year.24

The heavy-handed nature of the campaigns can be seen in the case of a poster branded as “separatist” that appeared in Terem Village in Yopurgha County of Kashgar in June 2003. After discovering the poster, local authorities detained hundreds of Uyghurs, including two schoolchildren, on suspicion of writing the poster, and levied fines on many of those who they detained.25 After nearly four years, police are still conducting a full investigation, hoping to find the poster’s author, and have not returned any of the fines that were collected.26

Security sweeps of Uyghur areas are often carried out shortly before the Chinese New Year. For example, in early 2005, on the eve of the Chinese New Year, more than 700 Uyghur youths were picked up by local Public Security Bureau officers in Ghulja City.27 These types of round-ups are often followed by mass sentencing rallies, parades of political prisoners though Uyghur neighborhoods, and public executions.28 As a result, many Uyghurs view Chinese New Year as “a dreadful season of possible death and destruction, followed by mourning and lamentation.”

The recent establishment of several government organizations suggests that human rights abuses as the result of “security” campaigns in East Turkestan will continue. It was reported in April 2007 that the Xinjiang and Tibet Working Groups had been established specifically to handle Uyghur and Tibetan separatism. Through an analysis of the working groups’ members, some Chinese experts predict that the PRC will be adopting an even more aggressive policy towards Uyghurs in East Turkestan. Luo Gan, Secretary General of the Central Political and Legislative Committee, leads the Xinjiang Working Group, with Vice Premier Hui Liangyu and Central Political Bureau member and XUAR Party Secretary Wang Lequan acting as deputy group leaders. All three are widely seen as holding hard-line views.

In addition to the two working groups, the State Ethnic Affairs Commission announced in March 2007 the creation of a new mechanism to monitor the activities of certain ethnic groups, especially Uyghurs and Tibetans, in order to “deal with emergencies resulting from ethnic issues.” According to Dainzhub Ongboin, vice director of the Commission, the monitoring group represents “a major step in the central government’s efforts to develop the country’s ethnic minorities.” However, one stated goal of this “development method” is to “clamp down on ethnic separatism so as to safeguard ethnic unity, social stability, and national security.”

Uyghurs in Government Custody: Ill-Treatment and Torture

Uyghurs who are arrested during “security” sweeps often suffer in government custody. Amnesty International has documented a number of extremely cruel forms of torture used by PRC authorities, including “severe beating and kicking; the use of electric batons; the use of handcuffs, shackles or ropes to tie prisoners in positions which cause intense pain; and exposure to extreme cold or heat.” Other torture methods used in East Turkestan are “unidentified injections which cause the victim to become mentally unbalanced or to lose the ability to speak coherently; the insertion of pepper or chili powder in the mouth, nose or genital organs; and the insertion of horse hair or wires into the penis.”

In late 2005, after making his first visit to China, during which he visited prisons in Urumchi, Lhasa, and Beijing, Mr. Manfred Nowak, the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Torture, confirmed that “torture was widespread” in China, especially in East Turkestan and Tibet. Forms of torture he documented included the “use of electric shock batons, cigarette burns, guard-instructed beatings by fellow prisoners, submersion in pits of water or sewage, exposure to extreme heat or cold, being forced to maintain uncomfortable positions, deprivation of sleep, food or water, (and) suspension from overhead fixtures by handcuffs.” Several released prisoners interviewed for this report confirm that they faced or witnessed these types of cruel and unusual methods of torture while serving their prison terms.

There are many specific examples of the use of these torture methods. In mid-2006, Tudahun Hoshur, a 31-year old trader from Ghulja City, was suspended from a ceiling by his hands, beaten, and denied food for three days for failing to memorize all 45 articles of the detention center’s regulations in Chinese. Ismail Semed, who was executed on February 8, 2007 for allegedly attempting to “split the motherland,” was convicted on the basis of confessions that were likely extracted from two other Uyghur prisoners through torture. Semed told his wife just before his execution that his confession was coerced through torture.

Alim and Ablikim Abdureyim, the sons of prominent Uyghur leader and human rights defender Rebiya Kadeer, were sentenced to seven and nine years in prison respectively. Ablikim were severely beaten by police officers on June 1, 2006 after they were detained near Urumchi. As a result of his beating, Ablikim lost consciousness and was taken to a hospital. Alim was detained and tortured, later “confessing” to the criminal and political charges brought against him as a direct result of this torture.

“Terrorism in the Spiritual Form”

All manifestations of Uyghur opposition, no matter how peaceful, are in danger of being labeled “separatist” or “terrorist” conspiracies against the government. On January 1, 2002, Uyghur poet Tursunjan Amat was arrested after reciting a poem purported to promote “separatism” at the Xinjiang People’s Hall in Urumchi. Soon afterwards, Wang Lequan warned against the danger of “separatist forces” using ideology to attack PRC policies, saying, “The anti-separatist struggle in the ideological field had always been a major battleground without the smoke of gunpowder.” One year later, another Uyghur poet was accused of “attacking” the PRC’s policy towards Uyghurs when his recitation of a poem in a Kashgar concert hall was labeled “terrorism in the spiritual form.”

According to a Human Rights Watch report, “In January 2002, pressure to follow the official ideological line was explicitly extended to include artists, writers, performers, and historians, among others, when Abulahat Abdurixit, the region’s chairman, made clear that ‘all who openly advocate separatism using the name of art’ would be purged.”

Since that time, official government sources have indicated that “the struggle against separatism” is wide-ranging and encompasses all potential dissent and opposition activities, including the peaceful expression of views via poems, songs, books, pamphlets, letters, or the Internet.

As a result of this campaign, many Uyghur writers have been arrested and given lengthy prison sentences. Abdulghani Memetemin, a writer, teacher, and translator, was sentenced to nine years in prison by the Kashgar Intermediate Court in June 2003 on charges of “sending secret state information out of the country.” Memetemin was arrested on July 26, 2002 when authorities discovered he had been translating news articles, forwarding official speeches, and conducting original reporting for the German-based East Turkestan Information Center.

Writer Nurmemet Yasin

Nurmemet Yasin, a well-known Uyghur writer, was sentenced to ten years in prison in 2005 for writing “Wild Pigeon,” a fictional story about a pigeon that commits suicide because it is unable to escape its cage. Shortly after Yasin’s story was published in the Kashgar Literature Journal in late 2004, he was accused of inciting separatism and arrested by Kashgar police who confiscated his computer, which contained 1,600 poems, commentaries, and stories, as well as an unfinished novel.

Kuresh Huseyin, chief editor of the Kashgar Literature Journal, was sentenced to three years for publishing Yasin’s “Wild Pigeon” in late 2005.

Sitiwaldi (Dilkex) Tiliwaldi, a young Uyghur man from Ghulja, disappeared in October 2004 after speaking to Serene Fang, a reporter from PBS who had come to investigate human rights violations against the Uyghur people by PRC authorities. After an interview about East Turkestan’s general situation, Tiliwaldi and Fang were approached by PRC security agents, who questioned and searched them and confiscated the interview tape and other materials. Fang was deported to the United States. Tiliwaldi’s whereabouts remain unknown.

III. The PRC’s Campaign Against Uyghurs Outside of China

Two disturbing trends in the era of the “war on terror” are the PRC’s use of the Shanghai Cooperation Organization to seek the return of Uyghurs from neighboring countries and its attempt to influence overseas Uyghur activists by harassing their... family members who remain in East Turkestan.

Shanghai Cooperation Organization

In 1996, China, Russia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, and Tajikistan created the Shanghai Five to resolve border issues remaining after the collapse of the Soviet Union. With the addition of Uzbekistan in 2001, the Shanghai Five became known as the Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO).

Since the founding of the Central Asian states in the early 1990s, PRC leaders have feared that these nations, which are culturally and linguistically related to Uyghurs, would sympathize with the Uyghur situation and support their cause. The PRC government views the approximately one million Uyghurs living in SCO countries as a threat, wary that this population might aid Uyghurs in East Turkestan to resist Chinese control of their traditional homeland. PRC authorities have used the SCO to suppress Uyghur opposition in East Turkestan and Central Asia, enlisting support for its attacks on Uyghurs.

In May 2006, during the SCO Summit, member states signed fifteen agreements aimed at strengthening cooperation in the fight against “terrorism.” China has also signed bilateral “anti-terror” agreements with Russia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan, Turkmenistan, and Pakistan, as well as several Arab states.

In addition, the PRC has conducted a series of large-scale exercises targeting the “three evil forces of terrorism, separatism, and extremism,” together with SCO member states Russia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, and Tajikistan, and SCO observer state, Pakistan. From August 9 to 17, 2007, more than 6,500 troops from SCO countries participated in “anti-terrorism” exercises in Urumchi, the capital of East Turkestan, and Chelyabinsk, Russia. This was the first time that the SCO has conducted military exercises inside East Turkestan. The scale of the exercises suggested that they were aimed at controlling and intimidating local populations and not just combating “terrorism.”

In a practice that began before 9/11, but that has accelerated in the past six years, SCO member and observer states have assisted the PRC in tracking down Uyghur political activists and extraditing them to China, where they face serious human rights violations, including torture, unfair trials, and execution. In all of these cases, the PRC and its neighboring states are in violation of the principle of non-refoulement under international law, which protects refugees from being returned to places where their lives or freedom could be threatened.

In 1999, Kazakhstan forcibly returned Uyghur political activists Kasim Maḥpir, Ilyas Zordun, and Zulfikar Memet to the PRC, where they were executed.62 In 2003, Pakistan forcibly repatriated Uyghur activist Ismail Semed to China, where he was executed on February 8, 2007 on charges of “attempting to split the motherland.”63 In the same year, Pakistan also deported Muhammed Tohti Metrozi, a recognized refugee awaiting resettlement in Sweden.64 Businessman Osman Alihan was extradited in July 2007, also from Pakistan. On May 10, 2006, Kazakhstan forcibly returned Uyghur activists Yusuf Kadir and Abdukadir Sidik to China, where they are being held in incommunicado detention.65

In yet another case, the UNHCR expressed concern that Arkin Sabirov, who disappeared on October 23, 2006, had been secretly deported to the PRC from Kazakhstan.66 Criticisms from human rights organizations and international pressure have led to secrecy surrounding the deportation of several Uyghurs. In 2004, Vladimir Bozhko, Kazakh National Security Agency Deputy Chairman, admitted that over a six year period 14 Uyghurs had been extradited from Kazakhstan to Kyrgyzstan and China for their “involvement in Uyghur separatist organizations.”67

The Case of Canadian Citizen Huseyin Celil

The extradition of Uyghur-Canadian Huseyin Celil from Uzbekistan to China in June 2006 is a recent and powerful example of the PRC’s use of the SCO to force the return of an ethnic Uyghur in violation of international law. In early 2006, Celil, a charismatic Uyghur imam and activist who had been granted Canadian citizenship, traveled with his wife to visit her parents in Uzbekistan.68

Huseyin Celil

In March 2006, Uzbek authorities detained Celil, reportedly at the request of the Chinese government, and later extradited him to the PRC to face charges of “terrorism,” refusing to recognize Celil’s Canadian citizenship. This act was in direct contradiction to Article 9 of the Nationality Law of the People’s Republic of China, which states that a person loses Chinese citizenship when he or she is naturalized as a citizen in a foreign country.69 Celil’s extradition immediately became a major issue in Sino-Canadian relations. Canadian Prime Minister

64 Amnesty International, Documented Cases of Uighurs Forcibly Returned to the XUAR, at http://www.amnesty.ca/archives/resources/huseyin_celil/uighur_forced_returns_cases.doc
Stephen Harper expressed great concern about Celil’s case when speaking with Chinese President Hu Jintao on the sidelines of the 2006 Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation meeting in Vietnam. Despite this direct and high-level intervention, in April 2007, a Chinese court sentenced Celil to life imprisonment.

According to Celil’s sister, in early 2007, while Celil was in Chinese custody, he was tortured and forced to sign a pre-written confession, which he signed only after he was told by prison guards that if he refused he would be “buried alive and disappear without any clues.” Celil was also denied the Canadian consular access he was entitled to under Sino-Canadian bilateral agreements. During his official visit to Beijing one week after Celil’s sentencing, Canadian Foreign Minister Peter MacKay raised the Celil case with Chinese Foreign Minister Yang Jiechi, demanding that Celil receive consular access. The PRC denied MacKay’s demands.

On July 10, a Chinese high court rejected Celil’s appeal in a process that lasted just 15 minutes before the court read a prepared statement nearly identical to a previous court ruling. During the appeal process, Celil’s lawyer was not allowed to defend him. After the ruling, Foreign Minister MacKay accused the Chinese government of failing to provide due process in Celil’s appeal.

Celil had traveled to Uzbekistan believing that his Canadian citizenship would protect him from Chinese persecution. Celil’s Canadian lawyer, Chris Macleod, believes that the PRC government, by punishing Celil, wished to send a warning to Uyghur human rights activists in exile that it is impossible “to hide behind a Canadian passport or a charter of rights or whatever other document in other countries you may have.” The Celil case remains one of the thorniest issues in Sino-Canadian relations, with Canada continuing to apply pressure for his release before the 2008 Beijing Olympics.

Targeting Rebiya Kadeer’s Family

Rebiya Kadeer

Another PRC strategy that is used to intimidate and silence Uyghurs is persecuting activists’ family members who live in East Turkestan. An example that illuminates this strategy is the case of Uyghur democracy leader Rebiya Kadeer.

On August 11, 1999, PRC authorities arrested Ms. Kadeer in Urumchi as she was on her way to meet with members of a U.S. congressional delegation. After her trial, she received an eight-year prison sentence for “providing secret information to foreigners."\(^79\) At the trial, the court presented openly available newspaper clippings as evidence of the “secret information” provided by Ms. Kadeer.\(^80\) She was incarcerated for nearly six years at Liudaowan Prison in Urumchi.\(^81\) On March 17, 2005, when she was released on “medical parole” just three days before U.S. Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice’s official visit to Beijing, Ms. Kadeer became the first Uyghur political prisoner to be freed by the PRC due to international pressure.\(^82\)

In order to reduce Ms. Kadeer’s influence among Uyghurs by pressuring her into silence after her exile to the United States, PRC authorities began an intense campaign of intimidation against her family members and business associates inside East Turkestan. Two months after her release, government authorities raided Ms. Kadeer’s Akida Trading Company in Urumchi, attempted to arrest her second youngest son Ablikim Abdureyim, and arrested company director Aysham Kerim and assistant Ruzi Mamat on unnamed charges.\(^83\) Two days later, more than 100 police raided the firm, confiscating fifteen large bags full of documents.\(^84\) According to Alim Abdureyim, Ms. Kadeer’s youngest son, police seized “every single piece of paper, documents, files, everything from our company…. therefore, the government can accuse us of being in any amount of debt they wish.”\(^85\)

On May 30, a day before the arrival in Urumchi of a U.S. delegation affiliated with the Congressional Human Rights Caucus, and two days after Ms. Kadeer was elected as the president of the Uyghur American Association in Washington, D.C., Ms. Kadeer’s two sons, Alim and Ablikim, along with her daughter, Rushangul, were detained.\(^86\) They were warned not to attempt to contact the visiting U.S. delegation and released.\(^87\)

Two days later, on June 1, International Children’s Day in China, Public Security agents severely beat Alim and Ablikim in front of their own children and forced Rushangul to call her mother so that Ms. Kadeer would hear the beating of her sons.\(^88\) After it was clear that Ms. Kadeer had heard her sons’ screams, the phone was taken away from her daughter.\(^89\) After the beatings, Alim was taken to a detention center, Ablikim was admitted to a hospital, and Rushangul was put under an intrusive form of house arrest.\(^90\) On June 13, Alim was officially charged with tax evasion and “attempting to divide the country,” Ablikim on conspiracy to overthrow the government, and Kahar, Ms. Kadeer’s oldest son, who a few days later had been transported in handcuffs from

In early November 2006, prior to her election as president of the German-based World Uyghur Congress (WUC), Ms. Kadeer was warned through a third party that her detained sons would suffer greatly if she were to run for the position.\textsuperscript{92}

Later that month, the day that Ms. Kadeer was elected as president of the WUC, Alim was sentenced to seven years in prison on charges of tax evasion and fined 500,000 yuan (USD 62,500) and Kahar was charged with tax evasion and fined 100,000 yuan (USD 12,500).\textsuperscript{93} Five months later, in April 2007, Ablikim was sentenced to nine years’ imprisonment by the Intermediate People’s Court in Urumchi on charges of “instigating and engaging in secessionist activities.”\textsuperscript{94}

Xinhua News, the official PRC news agency, reported that “Ablikim’s legal rights were protected during the trial and the information concerning the time and venue of the trial was publicized three days beforehand” and that Ablikim “confessed” to the charges against him during trial.\textsuperscript{95}

However, according to his family’s understanding, Ablikim was not allowed legal representation, the family was given no advance notice of the trial, and the “confession” was likely the result of torture. In November 2006, reportedly suffering from severe mistreatment, Ablikim was seen being removed on a stretcher from the Tianshan Detention Center.\textsuperscript{96}

V. Conclusion

PRC authorities have made great efforts to silence independent Uyghur voices both domestically and internationally. Repression in East Turkestan stems from the PRC government’s inability to address the basic democratic aspirations of the Uyghurs and has resulted in widespread, systematic, and egregious violations of Uyghurs’ human rights.

In the era of the “war on terror,” the PRC government has justified its repression in East Turkestan by attempting to link Uyghur dissidents and groups to international terrorism. Without presenting any evidence of a genuine terrorist threat, PRC authorities continue to defend the crackdown in East Turkestan in the name of fighting the “three evil forces of separatism, terrorism, and extremism.”

The PRC government has used frequent “strike hard” campaigns to target many peaceful expressions of Uyghur identity inside the country, and has been influential in the extradition of Uyghur activists from neighboring countries, after which they are subjected to non-transparent, irregular trials that regularly result in executions. As Uyghurs in exile have become increasingly vocal and successful in exposing the PRC’s gross human rights violations in East Turkestan, government authorities have begun to target activists’ family members in East Turkestan.

If the PRC wishes to be accepted as a legitimate member of the international community, it must cease the domestic and international campaigns it employs to silence Uyghur voices. The PRC must implement basic human rights, the rule of law, and democratic reforms in East Turkestan in order to be respected in the eyes of the world.
A new People’s Republic of China (PRC) policy recruits young Uyghur women from majority Uyghur areas of East Turkestan (also known as the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region or XUAR) and transfers them to work in factories in urban areas of eastern China. Though official propaganda slogans promote the program as an overwhelmingly positive experience for these women, less than two years after the initiation of the policy, it has already left a history of broken promises and shattered families. Local leaders, who are subject to intense pressure from higher levels of the PRC government, have used deception, pressure, and threats in order to recruit women to participate in the program. Under the policy, thousands of Uyghur women have been removed from their families and placed into substandard working conditions thousands of miles from their homes.

The PRC transfer policy:

- Focuses on southern East Turkestan, a majority Uyghur area that remains a center of traditional Uyghur culture and where the percentage of inhabitants who are Uyghur is presently the highest in the PRC.
- Targets marriage-aged women between the ages of 16 to 25.
- Intimidates the women and their families to compel them to participate in the program.
- Threatens local leaders who do not comply with the policy with removal from their posts.
- Places the young women into inhumane work conditions and with employers that do not honor work contracts.

1 Use of the term ‘East Turkestan’ does not define a ‘pro-independence’ position. Instead, it is used by Uyghurs wishing to assert their cultural distinctiveness from China proper. ‘Xinjiang’, meaning ‘new boundary’ or ‘new realm’, only came into official use in 1884, and reflects the perspective of those in the Qing dynasty (1644-1911) who gave it this name. This use of terminology, whether ‘Xinjiang’ or ‘East Turkestan’ is often compared by Uyghurs to use of the term ‘Tibet’ by Tibetans. That is, Tibetans use the name they choose, and not a translation of the Chinese ‘Xizang’ meaning ‘western treasure-store’.

UHRP Report: The Transfer of Young Uyghur Women to Eastern China

This government-sponsored transfer of young Uyghur women must be placed in the broader context of the PRC’s ongoing cultural attacks and human rights abuses against the Uyghur people. Uyghur religion, a moderate form of Sunni Islam that is a vital part of their ethnic identity, has been fiercely suppressed. The legal system is used as a tool of repression, with arbitrary detentions and torture commonly employed against any Uyghur who voices discontent with the government. Charges of “political crimes” and the death penalty have been shown to be disproportionately applied to Uyghurs. Uyghur women suffer from forced sterilizations and abortions, and corvée labor is still used in East Turkestan’s rural areas.

In addition, at the same time that PRC authorities are implementing a transfer policy of young women out of East Turkestan in the name of providing economic opportunities, they are also supporting the movement of huge numbers of Han Chinese economic migrants into the region. In light of these facts, the transfer policy can be seen as another aspect of Beijing’s effort to forcibly assimilate the Uyghur people and undermine the distinct Uyghur culture of East Turkestan.

I. Content and Scope of the Policy

In recent years, the PRC central government has directed all levels of the XUAR government to promote rural to urban migration as a solution to the poverty of the region. According to PRC statistics, in 2007 around 100,000 people from East Turkestan were working outside of the Autonomous Region, with most of these migrants located in Zhejiang, Beijing, Tianjin, Shanghai, and Shandong. Since the spring of 2006, a significant portion of these migrants have been made up of young Uyghur women recruited into a government program that provides workers for factories in eastern China.

The policy specifically targets women between the ages of 16 and 25 from the heavily Uyghur-populated areas of southern East Turkestan, a region that retains a strong and distinct Uyghur culture. Local leaders, sometimes joined by factory officials, offer the women Chinese language and skills training, and promise attractive salaries and transportation to the factories. The official Chinese press has supported the program through a series of articles that cast the program in a positive light, as a way to provide income for rural people and incorporate the women into the “great socialist family” of the Chinese motherland. These types of reports also stress that the program improves the “thinking and consciousness” of the women, improves their manners, and teaches them to be civilized.

Southern East Turkestan’s Kashgar Prefecture, an administrative district with a population of around 3.5 million people, more than 89 percent of whom are Uyghur, has been specifically targeted with the transfer policy. Exact numbers are difficult to ascertain, but reports in the state media and from independent investigations reveal the large scale of the program.

Payzawat (Jiashi) County, one of Kashgar Prefecture’s 12 administrative sub-regions, is a rural area with a population of 320,000 people, the vast majority of whom are Uyghur. The PRC transfer policy first publicly appeared in this county in April 2006 with the transfer of 212 Uyghur women to a factory in Haiyan, Zhejiang. In September of 2006, under the same program, another 121 Uyghur women from Payzawat County, all aged from 18 to 20 years old, were transferred to Hangu District of Tianjin. In the first three months of 2007, the number of young Uyghur women transferred out of Payzawat County had already reached 3,000.

Transfers of this kind can be documented for nearly every county in Kashgar Prefecture. In March of 2007, 186 Uyghur women were taken from Yengishahar (Yingjisha) County by a standing member of the county’s Communist Party Committee to a factory in Pinghu, Zhejiang.

to Tianjin in March and April of 2007. Kona Sheher (Shufu) County has sent six groups totaling more than 770 people to six different businesses in Tianjin. At the end of March 2007, Yarkand (Shache) County sent 300 people to Qingdao, Shandong. Early in 2007, 500 young women from Yarkand County were transferred to work in Qingdao and Zhejiang, as part of an official plan calling for the transfer of 6,000 Uyghur women during the course of the year.

II. Deception, Pressure, and Threats

Most of (the young women) were forced to come, but some of their parents were convinced that their daughters would get 2000 yuan (280 USD) a month, and the girls’ rooms would be like a hotel, etc. etc... after they came, they learned that everything is totally different.

Local officials are under great pressure from higher levels of the PRC government to enforce the transfer policy. Awut Teyip, the head of Number Nine Village in Yarkand county, indicated that the policy originated in Beijing, saying of his efforts to recruit young women from his village, “Our job is to follow central directives without asking any questions.” Many officials were told they would be removed from their posts if they refused to recruit women for the program. As a result, PRC leaders have used deception, pressure, and threats in the process of recruiting the young women for transfer.

Local leaders tout the program as a means of “providing employment opportunities and generating income” for rural Uyghur families. However, reports from these women and interviews with their family members reveal that the financial benefits from the transfers are far less than what is promised.

When they brought us here they said we would receive a fixed payment of 500 yuan (70 USD) per month. But after we came they said we would be paid according to our work. We had to finish the work they gave us to receive that payment. But it was impossible to finish it on time.

Further problems with earnings include salaries that are withheld for months as a ‘deposit’; garnished wages for medical problems developed on the job; and money deducted for expenses that were to be paid for by others, as promised to the women during recruitment.

The company said they paid the government officials for the trip, but they cut the money from the girls salary. I don’t know who took that money. The first month, they cut 50 yuan, the second month 10 yuan and they will cut this month, too. They will cut until they get a full refund for their payment.

Another method used to recruit young women into the program is to pressure people close to the women to convince them to participate in the program. One woman who entered the program explained,

I came here because my teacher begged me, because the government sent my teacher to convince me.

Interviews with several young women transferred under the policy indicated that local officials have often resorted to force in order to recruit women into the program. In an interview with Radio Free Asia, Tursun Barat, the head of Number Eight village in Yarkand County admitted, “We did force the girls to go.” One such woman was transferred to Tianjin:

I did not want to come. My parents also did not agree, but government officials forced my parents.

In another example, the father of Aynisa Tohti, who was transferred by village officials along with 212 other young women in March of 2007, stated in an interview that he was forced to allow his daughter to leave, a decision for which he feels deep regret.

Rural families are threatened with various types of punishments by local officials for resisting the program. For example, leaders of Number Nine Village in Yarkand County threatened farmers with the confiscation of their farming lands and the destruction of their houses if they refused to allow their daughters to participate. In the same village, young women were threatened with the confiscation of their resident registration cards and the denial of marriage certificates if they chose not to enter the program.\textsuperscript{33}

Opposition to the program is not tolerated. In April 2007, at a government conference that brought officials involved in the program together, Shi Dagang, Communist Party Secretary of Kashgar Prefecture, stated, “Transferring the rural labor force is an all-inclusive and major directional policy, closely tied to the future development of our region… Whomever obstructs the Uyghur public from working in the exterior will become the criminal of Kashgar and the criminal of the Uyghur people.”\textsuperscript{34} In July 2007, Uyghur parents peacefully protested against the forced transfer policy in Kucha County of Aksu Prefecture. The protest was forcibly dispersed and local authorities are still searching for its organizers.\textsuperscript{35}

III. Workplace Reality

"We call this place a prison. I think that there is no difference between here and a prison."\textsuperscript{36}

When the Uyghur women arrive at the factories they discover work hours in violation of their contracts, harsh conditions, and severe limitations on their freedom.

"We worked over ten hours every day, and most days we had to work extra. Usually we got off work at 5:00, and then at 6:00 we went back to work again for another shift and worked until 2 or 3 in the morning."\textsuperscript{37}

On some occasions the women are made to work 24 hours straight, with no overtime given.\textsuperscript{38}

Food and housing, both promised in the recruitment process, are substandard. A woman describes the situation in one factory:

"In the morning they boiled a little bit of rice with water to give us, and in the evening, one day they would give us just fried cabbage, another day just fried potatoes. It was very dirty, with insects showing up in the food, making it impossible to eat."\textsuperscript{39}

Housing conditions are not much better:

The heavy workload and unsanitary working conditions have caused kidney problems, skin diseases, and other health problems for the young women.41

Many local governments have instituted large fines against the families of women who leave their work contracts. These fines are reported to range from 3000 to 5000 RMB (420 to 700 USD), a huge sum for a rural Uyghur family.42 Even without these types of fines, women who wish to leave the factories find themselves without any support and facing the challenges of a great distance, a language barrier, and lack of funds.

IV. Uyghurs Out, Han In: The Context of the Transfer Program

At the same time that young Uyghur women are being transferred out of East Turkestan, the PRC government continues to support thousands of Han Chinese economic migrants who are flowing into the region in search of jobs. This Han Chinese in-migration has been responsible for dramatic demographic changes that threaten Uyghur culture. In 1955, Uyghurs made up 74.7 percent of the total population of East Turkestan and Han Chinese accounted for 6.1 percent.43 Today, Uyghurs make up 45 percent and Han 41 percent of the population, a number that excludes PLA soldiers, Chinese security forces, and much of the migrant population.44

In 2006 alone, more than 500,000 farmers from Gansu Province participated in a government-sponsored transfer, many earning more in ten weeks than a Uyghur farmer earns in an entire year.45 In order to facilitate these type of huge population transfers, PRC leaders recruit workers from rural areas, organize special trains, provide stipends, print informational brochures, and give logistical support at sending and receiving train stations.46 With this huge influx of migrants, the Uyghur language is being pushed out of the public sphere, Han businesses are replacing Uyghur shops, and, in only a few decades, PRC-style development has completely altered the layout of Uyghur urban centers which evolved over centuries.

Uyghurs find themselves at an economic disadvantage with respect to East Turkestan’s newly arrived Han population. A study of the 2000 census found that “there is a very strong correlation between areas of Han majority and high per capita income” and that this finding “is not just a correlative relationship, but a causal one.”

The 1995 industrial census showed that just 2 of 191 managers of large and medium sized businesses in East Turkestan were minorities, and that only around 11 percent of these businesses were located in areas with a majority of ethnic minorities. Civil service hiring has been shown to be biased against Uyghurs, with the majority of opportunities reserved for Han Chinese. In other employment areas, such as “professional and technical” jobs, minority employment figures have shown only modest increases, despite East Turkestan’s high rate of economic growth.

V. Conclusion and Recommendations

The connection between the transfer of young Uyghur women out of southern East Turkestan and the transfer of Han Chinese into the region does not appear to be coincidental. As already noted, the head of the Communist Party in Kashgar Prefecture views the transfer of young Uyghur women to eastern China as a “major directional policy, closely tied to the future development of our region.” Kashgar Prefecture is currently the focus of substantial “re-development,” and has recently been linked to the regional capital, Urumchi, by a train connection that has brought thousands of Han Chinese migrants to the area.

As the percentage of Uyghurs in East Turkestan’s population decreases annually, it is becomes less characteristically Uyghur. While much of this dynamic is facilitated by the in-migration of Han Chinese, the transfer of large numbers of young Uyghur women of child-bearing age out of the region exacerbates the process considerably.

At present, local and central government authorities in the PRC continue to aggressively implement this transfer policy, despite Uyghur resistance to, and resentment of, the program. Continuation of the policy will only further marginalize the Uyghur people and deepen Uyghurs’ mistrust of PRC officials, leading to even greater social tensions in East Turkestan.

The Uyghur Human Rights Project recommends that the government of the People’s Republic of China:

I. Overview of the Report

Uyghur language is under attack in East Turkistan 1 (also known as the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region or XUAR). In the past decade, and with increasing intensity since 2002, the People’s Republic of China (PRC) has pursued assimilationist policies aimed at removing Uyghur as a language of instruction in East Turkistan. Employing the term “bilingual” education, the PRC is, in reality, implementing a monolingual Chinese language education system that undermines the linguistic basis of Uyghur culture. 2 The new “bilingual” education imperative is designed to transition minority students from education in their mother tongue to education in Chinese. The policy marks a dramatic shift away from more egalitarian past policies that provided choice for Uyghur parents in their children’s languages of instruction. In the PRC “bilingual” education amounts to compulsory Chinese language education.

“Bilingual” education in East Turkistan is responsible for:

• Marginalizing Uyghur in the educational sphere with the goal of eliminating it as a language of instruction in East Turkistan.
• Forcing Uyghur students at levels ranging from preschool to university to study in a second language.
• Removing Uyghur children from their cultural environment and placing them into Chinese language “Xinjiang classes” located in inland China.
• Using Chinese language requirements and school mergers to force veteran Uyghur teachers out of the classroom.

1 Use of the term ‘East Turkistan’ does not define a ‘pro-independence’ position. Instead, it is used by Uyghurs wishing to assert their cultural distinctiveness from China proper. ‘Xinjiang’, meaning ‘new boundary’ or ‘new realm’, only came into official use in 1884, and reflects the perspective of those in the Qing dynasty (1644-1911) who gave it this name. This use of terminology, whether ‘Xinjiang’ or ‘East Turkistan’ is often compared by Uyghurs to use of the term ‘Tibet’ by Tibetans. That is, Tibetans use the name they choose, and not a translation of the Chinese ‘Xizang’ meaning ‘western treasure-store’. Uyghurs also choose to use a name other than the one designated by the Chinese authorities.

2 Uyghur is a Turkic language spoken by at least 11 million people, mostly located in East Turkistan, with significant populations also located in Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Uzbekistan, Afghanistan, Mongolia, Turkey, Australia, Germany and the United States. It belongs to the southeastern branch of the Turkic language family, a family which has about 200 million speakers in the world. Uyghur, seen as the heir to the Chagatai language that once served as a lingua franca of large parts of Central Asia, today serves as a lingua franca among many minority groups in East Turkistan. See Arienne Dwyer, The Xinjiang Conflict: Uyghur Identity, Language Policy, and Political Discourse, Washington: The East-West Center, 2005.
• Taking decisions on language of instruction for Uyghur children out of the hands of parents.
• Increasing tensions between Uyghurs and Han in East Turkistan.

This report begins by reviewing the PRC’s language policy commitments under domestic and international law and contrasting these agreements with the reality of East Turkistan’s language policy, including the recent push to marginalize Uyghur language education through “bilingual” education. It explores the effects of the Chinese language push on Uyghur students, teachers, and parents, as well as on ethnic relations, placing language policy into the context of other policies of assimilation directed at the Uyghurs. In conclusion, the report recommends that the PRC implement true bilingualism in East Turkistan’s schools.

II. China’s Language Policy: Theory and Reality

PRC Domestic Law and International Agreements Regarding Language Policy

Before looking closely at the current government policy aimed at removing Uyghur from East Turkistan’s schools, it is important to review PRC agreements under domestic and international law with regards to regional autonomy, language policy and education policy. By forcing Uyghur children to study in a language other than their mother tongue, China’s government is in clear violation of its own laws and agreements.

When the XUAR was established as an autonomous region of the PRC in 1955, it was given special powers of self-government under the concept of “regional autonomy”. This concept appears in Article 4 of the PRC Constitution and specifically mentions the importance of language:

Regional autonomy is practiced in areas where people of minority ethnic groups live in compact communities... All ethnic groups have the freedom to use and develop their own spoken and written languages and to preserve or reform their own folkways and customs.3

The legal framework of “regional autonomy” is spelled out in the Regional Ethnic Autonomy Law. This law establishes the principle that language policy in East Turkistan’s schools should be formulated at the local level:

Autonomous agencies in ethnic autonomous areas decide on educational plans in these areas, on the establishment of various kinds of schools at different levels, and on their educational system, forms, curricula, the language used in instruction and enrollment procedures.4

It goes on to guarantee language rights for minority students in the classroom:

Schools (classes) and other educational organizations recruiting mostly ethnic minority students should, whenever possible, use textbooks in their own languages and use these languages as the media of instruction.⁵

The rights of ethnic minorities regarding language of instruction are also spelled out in the PRC’s Compulsory Education Law, which reiterates the right of minorities to be educated in their mother tongue:

Schools in which the majority of students are of ethnic minorities may use the spoken and written languages of those ethnic minorities in instruction.⁶

In the international realm, the PRC is a signatory to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights and the Convention on the Rights of the Child, both of which guarantee minorities protection of their language rights. The Convention on the Rights of the Child, which China signed in 1992, specifically extends language protections to children:

In those States in which ethnic, religious or linguistic minorities or persons of indigenous origin exist, a child belonging to such a minority or who is indigenous shall not be denied the right, in community with other members of his or her group, to enjoy his or her own culture, to profess and practice his or her own religion, or to use his or her own language.⁷

PRC Language Policy in Practice in East Turkistan

This new wave is like a new Cultural Revolution for the Uyghurs. In the first Cultural Revolution the Chinese government destroyed the intellectuals. Now they are in the process of destroying the language.⁸

Despite these laws and agreements, the Uyghur language is being marginalized in East Turkistan. Chinese language names are overtaking long established Uyghur place names.⁹ Officials in East Turkistan whose first language is Chinese almost never learn Uyghur, even to a rudimentary level, though they are directed to do so under the Regional Ethnic Autonomy Law.¹⁰ Almost all Uyghur language newspapers, television reports and textbooks are direct translations of Chinese language materials. Uyghur farmers struggle with Chinese language instructions on fertilizer and pesticide labels, and emergency response centers lack operators with Uyghur language skills.\textsuperscript{11} This marginalization reflects a disparaging view of Uyghur language and culture that exists at the highest levels of the Chinese government and has informed the move towards a monolingual educational system in East Turkistan.\textsuperscript{12} Although linguists agree that all languages have the ability to be modern, that is to absorb new words and express new ideas based on societal and technological changes, the leading political figure in the region since 1995, XUAR Party Secretary Wang Lequan, justified “bilingual” education policies in this way:

\textit{The languages of the minority nationalities have very small capacities and do not contain many of the expressions in modern science and technology, which makes education in these concepts impossible. This is out of step with the 21st Century.}\textsuperscript{13}

This ingrained belief that Chinese language is more “advanced” and more “modern” than minority languages also pervades government thinking on “bilingual” education. Officials often speak of the need to “raise the quality” of minority students” using “bilingual” education, so that minorities can begin to receive the benefits of a “modern education”.\textsuperscript{14} This Chinese-centered understanding of language leads to many of the problems with the PRC’s “bilingual” education push. In the words of one Uyghur interviewee:

\textit{With the Chinese view of language, it is very hard to have a situation of equality. If there is no equality, then there is no dignity. If there was equality, then there would be no reason to force people to participate in “bilingual education”\textsuperscript{15}.}

\section*{III. The Myth of “Bilingual” Education: Compulsory Chinese Language Education Replacing Uyghur Language Education in East Turkistan}

Since the mid-1980’s China’s government has moved in stages towards making Chinese the only language of instruction in East Turkistan’s schools. “Bilingual” education in the PRC is the latest and most extreme example, amounting to compulsory Chinese language education. Over the past five years, government efforts at eliminating Uyghur language schools have accelerated dramatically as compulsory Chinese language education has been expanded at every educational level and every township in East Turkistan.

Students in experimental “bilingual” middle school classes numbered 2,629 in 1999. In 2004, there were 35,948 students and by 2005 the number had increased to 145,000. At first, these schools used both Uyghur and Chinese for instruction. More recently Uyghur has been severely restricted at what are ostensibly “bilingual” schools. The ultimate goal of “bilingual” education appears to be to replace Uyghur language instruction with Chinese language instruction in all areas of East Turkistan.

After the XUAR was established in 1955, Beijing pursued a relatively pluralistic minority policy that included support for Uyghur language schools and a flexible attitude about Chinese language education. Subsequently, the harsh cultural restrictions and intense political campaigns throughout China in the late 1950’s and 1960’s also destroyed the educational system in East Turkistan. After 1978, as China emerged from a period of cultural isolation and turmoil, ethnic groups experienced a period of relative tolerance that resulted in a rediscovery of many cultural practices. In this environment, the education system also recovered and education was available in both Uyghur and Chinese, giving parents the choice of educating their children in either language.

The foundations for compulsory Chinese education were laid in 1984, when the government set the goal of achieving full “minority-Han communicability” in a decade by “strengthening work on Chinese language education”. In support of this goal, Uyghur language schools began to teach Chinese in grade three instead of the first year of middle school, intensive teacher training was implemented, and quotas were set for Chinese-language majors at East Turkistan’s universities.

With this program moving more slowly than the government wished, “bilingual” education emerged with the formation of a committee to investigate the concept in 1987. The policy began to gain serious momentum after a 1992 “Work Conference on Ethnic Language and Writing” named “bilingualism” as the only way to raise the 19 Uyghur parents adopted different strategies as they sought to preserve the linguistic base of Uyghur culture, while also giving their children the opportunities afforded by Chinese language proficiency. Some parents sent sons to Chinese schools and daughters to Uyghur schools. Another strategy was to send the child to a Chinese school for the first few years to solidify a knowledge of Chinese and then switch him or her to a Uyghur language school in late elementary school. William C. Clark, “Convergence or Divergence: Uyghur Family Change in Urumqi” (Ph.D. diss., University of Washington, Seattle, 1999) and interviews with Uyghur parents.

educational level of minority people. “Bilingual” education was mandated in large technical schools and universities and experimental “bilingual” language classes for minority students were established in Urumchi, Chuguchak (Tacheng), and Turfan. At this time, “bilingual” education used both Uyghur and Chinese, though preference for Chinese can be seen in the fact that the “modern” subjects of math and the sciences were taught in this language with all other subjects taught in Uyghur.

The establishment of “Xinjiang classes” in 12 Chinese cities in 1997, provided a new model for compulsory Chinese language education and the marginalization of Uyghur language. “Xinjiang classes” remove top minority students in East Turkistan from their cultural environment and enroll them in classes with Chinese language instruction in high schools in large inland Chinese cities. Participation in “Xinjiang classes” is not entirely voluntary as one Uyghur parent explained:

Officials will put on hidden pressure. They say, “Your child has been chosen to be sent to a Xinjiang class. If he does not go there maybe you will have some trouble, maybe your child will have a bad future”.

XUAR Party Secretary, Wang Lequan, confirmed that “political thought training”, not academic preparation, was the chief goal of these “Xinjiang classes”. Officials view training in Chinese as a way to “deepen national feelings” and “strengthen correct political attitudes” as part of a “long term important strategic policy decision… to protect the unity of the motherland and safeguard the nation’s long and peaceful order”.

In some of these schools speaking Uyghur is prohibited, even in student dormitories, where pupils are watched by an on site monitor. Children from one “Xinjiang class” in Qingdao were forbidden to communicate in Uyghur, even when visited by an officially approved ethnic Uyghur journalist. By 2006, “Xinjiang classes” had been expanded from 12 to 26 Chinese cities and had a total enrollment of over ten thousand students.

The “Xinjiang class” method of instruction, in which minority students are taught almost exclusively in Chinese, has become a model for classes in East Turkistan as opportunities for Uyghur language education are forced out of existence at all levels from university to preschool. Since 2002, with the exception of minority languages and literature, classes at Xinjiang University have been taught solely in Chinese, virtually removing Uyghur as a language of instruction at the region’s most prestigious university. Local governments have committed to eliminating Uyghur language instruction, even in areas with large majority Uyghur populations. A document released by the Regional Bureau of Education in Khotan, where more than 90% of the population is Uyghur, announced that all classes under its jurisdiction would be taught in Chinese within five years. In Artush, a city in which 80% of the population is Uyghur, all classes will be taught in Chinese by 2012. In 2005, the “bilingual” education push was expanded into East Turkistan’s preschools.

“Bilingual” education has been supported through heavy government investment. Authorities have committed 430 million RMB to establish 1,009 Chinese language preschools within the next five years, with the goal of having 258,000 minority preschoolers enrolled in these types of schools by 2010. Parents of Uyghur preschool students in Southern East Turkistan’s rural prefectures who send their children to Chinese language schools receive a per diem subsidy. This subsidy is not available for the parents of children in Uyghur language schools. Maralbeshi (Bachu) county has allotted 150,000 RMB for every township to establish bilingual preschools. Bashkeram, where 95 per cent of the population is Uyghur, recently spent 430,000 yuan to establish a school in which Chinese is the only mode of instruction and speaking Uyghur on school grounds is forbidden.

School mergers have also resulted in greatly reduced availability of Uyghur language education. This process began in 2004 with the announced merger of 50 Uyghur and Chinese language schools and the directive that in these schools “teaching should be conducted in Chinese language as much as possible”. As a result, Uyghur schools are being merged out of existence all over East Turkistan. For example, in the industrial city of Maytagh (Dushanzi), out of five Uyghur language elementary schools and one secondary school in the 1980’s only one Uyghur language elementary school remains.\textsuperscript{41} In Shihezi, East Turkistan’s second largest city, school mergers have resulted in the elimination of Uyghur language instruction entirely.\textsuperscript{42}

In support of the language education push, the government has instituted an intense recruitment campaign and provided monetary incentives to attract teachers whose first language is Chinese, and who are almost always Han Chinese, to teach in East Turkistan’s schools.\textsuperscript{43} This is despite the fact that many qualified Uyghur teachers are being laid off due to Chinese language requirements. Though the teacher recruitment drive has been carried out in the name of “bilingual” education, none of the new teachers are required to speak Uyghur.

IV. Effects of “Bilingual’ Education in East Turkistan on Uyghur Children

“Bilingual” education in East Turkistan has had devastating effects on Uyghur children. By forcing Uyghur children to study in Chinese, the PRC government is harming their educational development. The method of language immersion as currently practiced in East Turkistan has been shown to result in a poor education for minority students.\textsuperscript{44} Well-developed skills in the mother tongue are linked with high levels of academic achievement and a consensus has formed rejecting the idea that children will “pick up” a foreign language through total immersion. In fact, the added pressure of learning in a second language has repeatedly been shown to have negative effects on a child’s development and motivation, which in turn leads to frustration and higher drop out rates.\textsuperscript{45}

An ethnically Uyghur former teacher who taught in Chinese in a “bilingual” school for several years noticed the negative effects on his students:

\textit{In class the students must speak in Chinese, then when they go home, they must speak in Uyghur. This gives them a lot of stress. Also, their parents can not help them with their homework. This gives the children more and more stress. In the end, this disturbs their mental development and their educational development. After a while the stress of speaking Uyghur at home and then speaking Chinese at school means that the student loses interest in studying.}\textsuperscript{46}

Students also suffer the loss of both qualified teachers and quality instruction. Under the Chinese language push, Uyghur language teachers must pass a standardized Chinese proficiency test in order to continue teaching. Those teachers who are unable to do so, are given a short period of time to improve their Chinese to passing levels. 47 Some teachers who cannot ultimately pass the test are forced out of the classroom through retirement while others are shifted into non-teaching roles. One Uyghur teacher talked about the situation at his school:

_We had seven Uyghur teachers, but after the change there are only two. All the others are gone. Some are forced to leave. Others are humiliated. One teacher was shifted to be a cleaner at the student dormitory. Another was moved to the application department to do menial tasks like getting water and filing. I do not want to say that these are not important jobs, but after a decade as a teacher, when you become a cleaner, this is a humiliation. These were good teachers._48

Uyghur teachers who do pass a proficiency test are often forced into a situation in which both students and teachers are using a second language:

_These teachers come into a class and must speak Chinese. A whole class full of Uyghur children and a Uyghur teacher. But because the teacher does not speak Chinese well, the students laugh and ask to be transferred out of the class._49

The result is the loss of dedicated teachers. One Uyghur teacher who passed the Chinese proficiency test eventually gave up teaching out of frustration with PRC policy:

_I loved my students. They were young with fresh ideas. Even when I was upset, I could go and teach and then one hour later I would feel refreshed. I had lots of students who came from the countryside. Using Uyghur I was able to teach these kids... But, because of the situation, I had to give it up and go do a job that I do not like._50

V. “Bilingual” Education in Context

“Bilingual” education in East Turkistan has evolved in an increasingly repressive political environment, as one aspect of a government driven project to assimilate Uyghurs by attacking and diluting their culture. It was conceived around the time of the founding of the post-Soviet Central Asian states in 1991, a turning point in the PRC’s view of East Turkistan, when the government began to become obsessed with “security” and “stability” in the region. 51 Since 1996, around the time “bilingual” education policies were first being tested on a wide scale, there have been at least nine “anti-crime” campaigns in the XUAR that have targeted the Uyghur population.\textsuperscript{52} Since 2001, when “bilingual” education was dramatically expanded, China has used the “war on terror” to suppress any measure of displeasure with the government.\textsuperscript{53} One interviewee observed:

\begin{quote}
People who believe in a bilingualism that does not conform to the Chinese view of things are in danger of being thrown into prison and labeled separatist, or terrorist.\textsuperscript{54}
\end{quote}

In 2004, the year in which a particularly harsh “strike hard, extreme pressure” campaign aimed at repressing “the three evils” of “separatism, extremism, and terrorism” resulted in the arrest of hundreds of Uyghurs, the rate at which “bilingual” education was eliminating Uyghur from East Turkistan’s schools increased dramatically.\textsuperscript{55}

Uyghur religion, a moderate form of Sunni Islam that is crucial to their ethnic identity, has been fiercely suppressed.\textsuperscript{56} The legal system is used as a tool of repression, with arbitrary detentions and torture commonly used against any Uyghur who voices discontent with the government.\textsuperscript{57} Charges of “political crimes” and the death penalty have been shown to be disproportionately applied to Uyghurs.\textsuperscript{58} Uyghur women suffer from sterilizations and forced abortions, corvée labor is still used in rural areas, and the transfer of Uyghurs, especially young women, from East Turkistan to inland China is common.\textsuperscript{59}

While “bilingual” education has been pushing Uyghur language out of East Turkistan’s schools and human rights abuses against Uyghurs have increased, Uyghurs have also experienced severe demographic and economic pressures. Han Chinese in-migration, aided by government policies, has been responsible for dramatic changes that threaten Uyghur culture. In 1955, Uyghurs made up 74.7 percent of the total population of East Turkistan and Han Chinese accounted for 6.1 percent.\textsuperscript{60} Today Uyghurs make up 45 percent and Han 41 percent of the population, a number that excludes PLA soldiers, Chinese security forces, and much of the migrant population.\textsuperscript{61}

As the Han population has increased, they have also received a greater share of the economic benefits from East Turkistan’s growth, including economic and employment opportunities not available to Uyghurs.\textsuperscript{62}

teacher of Chinese speaking Uyghur students remembers:

At job fairs in schools I would go with my students to look for jobs but the signs will say 'we don’t want minority people’. I felt ashamed, humiliated. My students, they study hard, but they still have no opportunities, no jobs. So I felt like I was teaching a lie.63

A study of the 2000 census lends support to the Uyghur claim of economic discrimination, finding that “there is a very strong correlation between areas of Han majority and high per capita income” and that this finding “is not just a correlative relationship, but a causal one.”64 The 1995 industrial census showed that just 2 of 191 managers of large and medium sized businesses in Xinjiang were minorities and that only around 11 per cent of these businesses were located in areas with a majority of ethnic minorities.65 Civil service hiring has been shown to be biased against Uyghurs, with the majority of opportunities reserved for Han Chinese.66 In other employment areas, such as “professional and technical” jobs, minority employment figures have shown only modest increases, despite East Turkistan’s high rate of economic growth.67 For these reasons many of the most vocal opponents of “bilingual” education are Uyghurs who are fluent in Chinese.

VI. Recommendations: Protect and Support Uyghur Language in East Turkistan

I am not against Uyghurs learning Chinese. Language is an instrument for life. But giving people a choice and pushing people to learn Chinese is different. Teach Uyghur and teach Chinese.68

The PRC should immediately end the current policy of eliminating Uyghur language education from East Turkistan and, at a minimum, return to the policy of allowing for both Uyghur and Chinese language education systems. Bilingual education will work only if authorities support schools in which both Uyghur and Chinese are recognized as important regional languages and serious academic classes are offered in both languages.

Government support of Uyghur language would both improve ethnic relations and contribute to economic growth in East Turkistan. Many observers have noted that language issues play a large role in the ethnic tensions of the region.69

65 Ibid.

A commitment to Uyghur language on the part of the government would ultimately contribute to the goal of stability by easing an area of serious Uyghur discontent.

A commitment to Uyghur language would also allow China to take even greater advantage of its trade relations with Central Asia. Uyghur is very closely related to Uzbek and mutually intelligible with the other Turkic languages of Central Asia. In 2005, trade between East Turkistan and Central Asia comprised 40 percent of China’s overall trade with the region. In 2006, this trade amounted to nearly 11 billion dollars and is expected to continue to grow substantially in the future.

Many countries have instituted language policies that accommodate two or more languages within one geographic area. Multiple languages are protected under the law and in practice in South Africa, India and Switzerland, for example. In Quebec, the native French-speaking population enjoys special linguistic rights based on their history in the region.

While Uyghur language rights are protected in PRC law and under its international agreements, this is not reflected in reality. China should address the serious problems that exist in the implementation of its “bilingual” education policy.

The Uyghur Human Rights Project recommends that the PRC:

- Stop forcing Uyghur children to be educated in a second language.
- Respect its own laws and international agreements by allowing for the use of and committing to the protection of Uyghur language.
- Engage local Uyghur leaders in the formulation of a humane and dignified language policy.
- Support the development of the Uyghur language and Uyghur language materials.
- Work to end economic discrimination based on ethnic identity.
